

Jewish Property Worth Millions Is Destroyed By Mobs in Germany

Synagogues Burned, Dynamited or Damag- ed in Reprisals for Death of Ernst Von Rath

Stores Looted, Windows Broken in Many Cities As Youths Rove Streets; 21 Arrested

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, Nov. 10 (AP)—The greatest wave of anti-Jewish violence since Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933 swept Nazi Germany today and Jews were threatened with new official measures against them.

Millions of dollars worth of Jewish property was destroyed by angry crowds. Jewish stores were looted. Synagogues were burned, dynamited or damaged in a dozen cities.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, calling for a halt in the demonstrations, declared that "the final answer to Jewry will be given in the form of laws or decrees."

Day of Vengeance

It was a nation-wide day of vengeance for the death yesterday of Ernst Von Rath, secretary of the German embassy in Paris, who was shot Monday by a 17-year-old Jew, Herschel Grynszpan.

Bands of youths roved the streets in Berlin and other cities from early morning on, smashing windows of Jewish shops. In many places crowds which gathered after day-break pushed into the establishments and came out with loot. Most of Berlin's 1,000 Jewish stores were plundered.

At the height of the demonstration few police were seen. One detachment of police in the heart of Berlin was charged by a mob which pushed them aside and began plundering.

After more than 12 hours of violence Goebbels appealed to the people to refrain from further demonstrations.

21 Looters Arrested

The appeal was issued at 4 p. m., but at first apparently had no effect in the west end of Berlin. Three hours later it was repeated by radio. Then police appeared on Koenigsstrasse, where a number of Jewish shops are situated, arrested 21 looters and cleared the street.

"The justifiable and understandable indignation of the German people over the cowardly Jewish murder of a German diplomat in Paris has resulted during the past night

O'Connor Majority Is Nearly 68,000

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP)—Study of virtually complete election returns in Maryland emphasized today the Democratic sweep to power by majorities which broke all-time records in the senatorial and gubernatorial contests.

Governor-Elect Herbert R. O'Connor, who carried 17 of the 23 counties and held a majority of more than 40,000 in Baltimore City, won in every section of the state to roll up a margin of nearly 68,000 votes over Gov. Harry W. Nice, the Republican candidate.

With only a few precincts uncounted, the vote gave:
O'Connor, 302,424.
Nice, 234,674.

O'Connor's majority outstripped the previous record, set by former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, when he won a fourth term in 1930 with an edge of 66,775 over William F. Broening, the G. O. P. entry.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, the conservative Democrat who withstood the New Deal primary "purge" was running a majority which appeared likely to reach 200,000 over Judge Oscar Leser, the badly-beaten Republican senatorial candidate.

Railroad Station Built Before Locomotive Closed by the B.&O.

Relay, Md., Nov. 10 (AP)—Padlocks barred today the doors of a little railroad station that antedated the locomotive.

One hundred and eight years ago the little station opened in what then was a thriving little town southwest of Baltimore.

There the "trains" on the original Baltimore and Ohio railroad changed motive power.

They stopped at the relay station while hostlers unhitched sweating teams of horses who pulled the trains from Baltimore and hooked up new teams to finish the run to the famous flour mills then located at Ellicott.

Peter Cooper only a few months before had run his "Tom Thumb" steam engine over the line. But

French Fearful of Disorders in Paris On Armistice Day

War Veterans Assemble from All Provinces for Parade

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP)—Fearful of Armistice day disorders the French government tonight banned any parades except the annual march to the tomb of France's unknown soldier scheduled for tomorrow morning.

Heavy forces of armed mobile guards were concentrated in Paris as precaution against disorders which might result from war veterans' demands for formation of a new "public safety" cabinet.

The ban issued by Premier Edouard Daladier's government specifically mentioned the broad Champs Elysee down which French war veterans are to march in the morning. Tens of thousands of war veterans from the provinces were gathered in the capital while the nation united to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of peace, but divided on how to preserve it.

Veterans Have Own Method

The veterans, representing millions of their comrades, came to demonstrate for their own method. They want a "public safety" government to rebuild the nation.

Premier Edouard Daladier was head of the cabinet which was forced to resign after riots in February, 1934, in which troops fired on crowds of veterans who marched on the Chamber of Deputies. Thirty-two died and many were wounded as a result of the riots and others which followed.

Many of the former soldiers and other Frenchmen saw France's negotiations for a "war renunciation" pact with Germany and the "peace of Munich" as an open admission that France had failed to prevent her former enemy from regaining its pre-war strength and snatching France's scepter as leader of Continental Europe.

Washington County Democrat Elected

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 10 (AP)—Joseph D. Misch, a Democrat, was elected to the state senate for Washington county today defeating Ernest W. Miller, Republican incumbent, by a majority of 902.

Four Democrats and two Republicans were elected to the state house of delegates. The Democrats are Fred C. Beachley, Harvey M. Miller, both incumbents, S. Rinehart, Conhill and Clarence B. Mason. The two Republicans are Henry Holzappel 3rd, and Allen T. Myers, the incumbents.

Stimulation of Private Industry Seen By Leaders

Many Believe Election Is Sure To Bring New Policy

RELIEF EXPENDITURES MAY BE MUCH LOWER

Roosevelt Held Likely To Propose New Economic Plan

By HENRY PAYNTER

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Stimulation of private industry—particularly heavy goods—coupled with major reductions in relief spending, is expected by some leading figures in the financial and industrial community as a sequel to the election.

Private and extended conversations during the past six weeks between President Roosevelt and some business leaders have led these Wall Street sources to forecast a new phase of national economic policy for the final half of the president's second term.

Fully recognizing that characteristics of the new economic plan may be altered before its delivery to the nation, they said they discerned its principal features to be:

New Policy Predicted

1. A long range heavy industry recovery program under the guise of national defense, which Wall Streeters have urged as likely to be more enduring than the short-lived recovery cycles depending on WPA and other efforts to stimulate consumers goods.

2. A drive to get 80 per cent or more of those on WPA payrolls back in gainful public employment within 15 months, with the objective of paying down relief spending to a minimum.

3. Drastic reduction of PWA and all forms of federal grants, except for national defense, accompanied by a switch in the federal fiscal program in the direction of a pay-as-you-go policy, requiring a broadening of the tax base and general increase in taxation timed to keep pace with the business recovery.

4. Expansion of the nation's international trade in connection with a projected international peace program.

5. Definite limitation to further expansion of federal social and economic reforms, accompanied by consolidation and adjustment of gains already made.

Claim Knowledge of Reforms

Some of these leaders said they had explicit assurances from the president that limits would be set to some social and economic reforms begun during the first half of the president's second term.

Significant to informed Wall Street commentators is the fact that widely published hints of the extent of the "national defense" program have brought practically no criticism from the electorate, and that hence even bitterly anti-Roosevelt industrial leaders may be expected to co-operate in a $5,000,000,000 heavy industry recovery program put on a patriotic basis.

Wall Street comment emphasizes that some New Dealers prominently associated during the past year or two with broad social and economic reform programs have seemingly not been privy to these new discussions.

In fact, some now say they believe the president accurately foresaw the change in popular sentiment reflected in the election results and began weeks ago to shape new fundamental policies which would take cognizance of that change.

Pearl Buck Wins 1938 Nobel Prize

Stockholm, Nov. 10 (AP)—An American, Pearl Buck, author of "The Good Earth," and an Italian, Enrico Fermi of the University of Rome, discoverer of a new element, today won the 1938 Nobel prizes for literature and physics—$37,975 each.

The literature award went to Mrs. Buck for the novel on Chinese life, one of her several novels dealing with the China she came to know as the daughter of missionary parents.

Observers commented on the fact that "The Good Earth" was published in 1931 and Nobel prizes usually are restricted to works published in the year preceding each award. "The Good Earth" also won the 1932 Pulitzer prize.

Mrs. Buck, who now lives at Great Neck, N. Y., was born in 1892 at Hillsboro, W. Va. She is the third American to win the Nobel literature award. The others were Sinclair Lewis in 1930 and Eugene O'Neill in 1936.

It was announced that Fermi won the physics prize "as a reward for his discovery of new elementary radioactive substances engendered by irradiation of neutrons" and for other research on reactions created by neutrons.

New Deal Defeat More Pronounced In Final Returns

Latest Figures Add To Magnitude of GOP Victory

COALITION MAY BLOCK ROOSEVELT PROGRAM

Republicans and Demo- crats Get Together in House

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The newest compilations of Tuesday's election results only serve to emphasize, in the opinion of most analysts, the magnitude of the reverses suffered by the New Deal.

The turnovers of offices fell short of a political revolution only because of the stupendous congressional majorities the Democrats accumulated between 1930 and 1938. In almost any other election year back to dimly recalled times, such a sweep as the Republicans achieved last Tuesday would have meant actual transfer of party control of either House or Senate.

Had that happened, President Roosevelt would have been heading back to Washington to prepare for the next congress in circumstances strikingly similar to the experience of his only two Democratic predecessors in the White House since the '60s. Cleveland and Wilson both dealt with congresses in which one house or the other was in the hands of Republican opponents.

Democrats Still "Safe"

President Roosevelt is not confronted by that situation. His party retains numerically that "safe" margin of control of the new House. It still dominates the Senate two-to-one and is entrenched there so firmly that even a Republican sweep of the presidency and the House in 1940 would leave the Senate still Democratic.

Yet the nose count of party strength in the new congress does not take account of the opposition President Roosevelt has encountered from members of his own party.

It was among Anti-Roosevelt Southern Democrats that talk of a definite coalition with the Republican minority to block New Deal measures arose last session. In the light of Tuesday's election results, many observers believe such a coalition may be a major problem for the president in charting his legislative course for the remainder of his term.

It projects a grave question mark as to whether any important legislation can flow from the new congress except, as in the case of the strengthening of national defense, where no political or policy controversy is involved.

Coalition Powerless

Even though Republicans and many Democrats present a united front of opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, he still retains the power of the veto. With that power, it is felt here, he can in all likelihood repulse raids on major New Deal enactments. There are still enough New Deal Democrats in both houses to furnish the one-third vote that is all that is necessary to sustain a veto.

Whether it comes to a struggle between the president's veto power and a congress dominated by a majority hostile to the president, as it did in Cleveland's day, remains to be seen. Much depends, observers believe, on what road the president takes. For that reason, his every word and act between now and the January day when the new congress assembles to receive his report on the state of the union will have special meaning and significance.

Pershing In Armistice Day Plea Urges Stronger National Defenses

War-Time Commander of A.E.F. Asks Prompt Action

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—General John J. Pershing counseled the nation today, 20 years after he led the American armies to victory in the World War, to take "prompt and vigorous action" to reinforce its defenses.

"The situation in the world today is as menacing as at any critical time in history," the gray, but erect, commander of the A.E.F. said in an Armistice Day statement.

"Let there be visited upon us the recent experience of England and France," he urged an "adequate," thoroughly trained and equipped army, supported by a mobilized industry.

Pershing's pronouncement, a rare expression of his views on public affairs, came on the eve of a national day of remembrance of the war.

Britain To Spend Billion Dollars For Big Airforce

Kingsley Reveals Plans To Discourage Any Attacks

Expects To Have About 100,000 Men in Ser- vice by June

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—Air secretary Sir Kingsley Wood told the House of Commons today that Britain would spend $1,000,000,000 next year to produce an airforce "capable of making it not worth the cost of anyone" to attack her.

The estimate for next year previously was $600,000,000. Calling for continued recruiting of men for the Royal Air Force, the air minister disclosed that in the last five months 13,670 men had enlisted. He estimated that the personnel at present nearly 85,000, would reach 100,000 by next June. In forecasting a 40 percent boost in expenditures for aviation, Sir Kingsley said that between 5,000 and 6,000 fast fighting planes, designed to combat invading bombers, either had been ordered or would be ordered.

When the air minister finished his address, Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary, warned that democracy "has to meet a new challenge in every field."

Without mentioning names, he said a number of great states were at present organized on a wartime basis and asserted that in Europe there was "a general collapse of liberty."

He told Commons that "fortified towns are going to be our role now until the bomber is tamed, or civilization as we know it is destroyed."

"Britain is a first-class power or nothing," he declared. "With her area and her population she literally cannot live as a second or third-class power."

Murphy To Return To Law Practice

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 10 (AP)—Gov. Frank Murphy, New Deal Democrat who lost his reelection campaign last week, said tonight there was no basis for reports he would receive a federal appointment.

Murphy, who ran with President Roosevelt's blessing and was defeated by a former Republican governor, Frank D. Fitzgerald, announced that he and his legal adviser, Edward G. Kemp, would become law partners in Detroit after his term ends Jan. 1.

Yes, Judge's Wife Has A Very Good Nose

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 10 (AP)—Attorneys were arguing in a liquor case in Federal court today. The point seemed to be whether the witness could accurately smell a broken jug of moonshine at 40 yards. Judge Alexander Akerman, impatient, interrupted: "Put Mrs. Akerman on the stand. She can smell liquor in an adjoining county."

6 Convicts Shot In Battle With Nashville Police

One Killed, Others Cap- tured; Deputy Wounded

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 10 (AP)—Six desperate convicts broke from the Tennessee penitentiary today amid a bloody gun battle that ranged along a thickly-populated Nashville street and ended with five fugitives back in custody, wounded, the sixth dead and Deputy Warden C. C. Woods in grave condition.

Two aides of Woods, Assistant Deputy Warden Hub Sampson and Guard Elmo Green, who, like him, were forced to ride in a prison truck as hostages during the prisoners' wild dash, were less seriously injured. Four other guards were slightly hurt.

Guard John T. Strickland said he and guards Ed Taylor, Dick Smith and Luis Tollett were lured separately into the prison band room by the convicts on the ruse that some prisoners were drinking shellac. The guards, he went on, were seized, their guns taken and then slashed with homemade knives and beaten. The convicts then dashed to the deputy warden's office.

The armed prisoners took the officials captive, rushed outside, seized a truck being driven by a trusty and made for the gate. There, officials said, the gatekeeper was held up and disarmed and forced to open the way under threat of death to the hostages.

As the truck passed out of the prison yard, guards began firing and set up a pursuit which was speedily joined by state and city police in squad cars with sirens screaming. M. A. Warren, assistant chief of the state highway patrol, said about twenty officers discovered the fugitives in their truck about a mile from the prison. The pursuers poured pistol, shotgun and machine gun fire into the fleeing vehicle.

"We shot it out with them," he said simply, "and they stopped only when we shot them all down. I think their guns were emptied by that time."

One of the fugitives, Millard Edmonds, serving a robbery sentence, died shortly after entering the prison hospital. Prison doctors said none of the other fugitives was wounded critically.

Republic Steel To Seek Reopening of Ohio Strike Case

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP)—Republic Steel Corporation attorneys informed the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today they would petition the court within two weeks to direct the National Labor Relations Board to reopen its order requiring the company to re-employ 5,000 Ohio workers involved in a 1937 strike.

At the same time, Robert B. Watts, counsel for the board, asked a definite date be set for hearing the company's appeal from the board order. The court announced it would delay action on Watt's petition until it rules on the company's new move.

Watts said he would oppose any petition by the company for reopening the hearings. He said the board would insist that the court settle the case on the board's petition for enforcement of the order.

Republicans Hope To Force FDR To Keep to The Right

Plan To Serve Virtual Ul- timum on the President

G.O.P. Leaders Confident They Can Block New Deal

By The Associated Press
Prominent Republicans, flushed by their party's victories at the polls, appeared last night to be getting ready to serve a virtual ultimatum on president Roosevelt in some such words as these:

"Veer to the right, or face two years of stalemate in congress!" They expressed confidence that, combined with Democrats critical of many Roosevelt policies, they could block the president if he insisted on following a "leftward" course.

On the other hand, prominent New Dealers were declaring that the election was not a repudiation of President Roosevelt's "liberal policies." Secretary of the Interior Ickes spoke of the possibility of Mr. Roosevelt's being drafted for a third term drive in the interest of continuing the New Deal.

80 More Seats in House

Meanwhile returns from Tuesday's balloting were all but complete. They showed that 80 Republican votes had been added to that party's roster in the House, and eight in the senate. Two house elections remained in doubt.

In the Indiana senatorial race, which was so close that it was decided only yesterday afternoon, Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat, finally beat Raymond E. Willis. In Iowa, scene of another nip-and-tuck contest, Senator Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, was the apparent winner over Former Senator Lester Dickinson, Republican.

In all, but without counting the uncertain elections, the Republican party held 169 places in the house, out of a total membership of 435 and 23 seats in the senate of a total of 96. Thus a coalition of 40 anti-New Deal Democrats with the Republican membership would give such force a majority. On some past issues, many more than 40 Democrats have deserted the administration.

In the senate, the Republicans would have to pick up 26 Democratic votes to assume command.

Popular Guessing Game

In the light of this situation, Washington's most popular game was speculating on what would happen when congress meets again. To most minds, the alternatives were some measure of capitulation to conservative opinion on the part of the president or two years of governmental deadlock.

A prominent congressional Republican said that if the president should insist upon following an unchanged course, he would be beaten

Hawaiian Islands Feared in Danger From Tidal Wave Following 'Quake

Honolulu Harbor Rising Rapidly As Result of Severe Shocks Near Aleutian Islands

Territorial Officials Asked To Warn Ship Masters; Slight Earthquake Felt In Alaska

Honolulu, Nov. 10 (AP)—Lieut. Commander J. H. Peters of the U. S. coast geodetic survey, reported the Honolulu harbor water level rising late today at a rate of three-quarters of a foot every 20 minutes following a severe earthquake, apparently centered near the Aleutian Islands.

Maul Island, Southwest of Oahu, on which Honolulu is situated, reported a two and one-half foot rise above normal at 3:05 P. M. (8:35 P. M. EST.) following an 18 inch drop below normal.

Commander Peters said the rise in Honolulu harbor started at 3 P. M. (8:30 P. M. EST.), about five hours after the first shocks were recorded.

Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, volcanologist at the Kilauea observatory on Hawaii island, earlier had reported "a very serious earthquake," apparently in the Aleutian Islands, might cause a tidal wave on the Eastern shores of the Hawaiian Islands. He asked assistance of territorial officials in warning Hawaiian harbor masters.

Hilo, Hawaii, Nov. 10 (AP)—A very serious earthquake, possibly in the Aleutian Islands, that might cause a tidal wave on the Eastern shores of the Hawaiian Islands, was reported today by Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, volcanologist at the Kilauea observatory near here.

On premise that it originated in the Aleutians, Jagger, asked assistance of territorial officials in warning Hawaiian masters.

"It is too big to have been from Japan," he added.

Anchorage, Alaska, Nov. 10 (AP)—Light earthquake shocks were felt here at 10:25 A. M. (3:25 P. M. EST.) today, and the Woodley airways radio station received a report of a severe quake at Naknek station on Bristol Bay.

The Naknek report came from a radio operator who also said there was no damage. Naknek is at the upper end of the Aleutian peninsula, on the North side.

Decline in Sales by Va. Dept. Stores

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Virginia department stores showed a decrease of 4.7 per cent in October sales compared with sales in October 1937, and a decrease of 1.8 per cent, in cumulative sales for the first ten months of this year against the corresponding period of last year, the Federal Reserve bank of Richmond reported today.

Richmond stores sales decreased 3.9 per cent for October and 7 per cent, for the ten-month period; Norfolk stores 2.5 per cent and 1.8 per cent; Lynchburg 8.8 per cent and 5.0 per cent.

Decreases shown by other states in the fifth federal reserve district for October at the ten-month period were: West Virginia 11.2 per cent and 13.8 per cent; North Carolina 4.7 per cent and 7.2 per cent; South Carolina 4.6 per cent and 8.3 per cent.

Department stores sales in the fifth district fell off six per cent, in October compared with October of last year and dropped five per cent, for the first ten months of the year compared with the corresponding period of 1937. The bank attributed the decrease in October to unseasonably mild weather.

20 Years After Defeat Germany Is Near Mastery of Central Europe

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The world enters a new cycle with the twentieth anniversary of the armistice tomorrow.

This anniversary ends the post-war era. The League of Nations has lost its force as a peacemaker, for the time being at least. Post-war treaties have been put aside by direct action. France has fallen from her position of dominance on the European continent.

Twenty years ago tomorrow the war which cost 33 nations $188,000,000,000 and the lives of 10,000,000 men ended with Germany the loser. Today, Germany, risen from defeat, appears on the way toward mastery of Central and Southeastern Europe. A gigantic world armament race is on. Great Britain and France, standing out of Adolf Hitler's path, hope for "peace in our time" through agreements with Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Japan Seizing China
Japan is trying to digest half-conquered China despite her treaties with the United States, Britain and other powers. The United States itself is concerned with uniting the American republics against any threat of attack from the old world. Thus in twenty years the post-war peace fabric of collective security has collapsed and the map of Europe and Asia has been re-drawn. Even Britain's plain-spoken rebel, Winston Churchill, finds it

Johanna Hofmann Denies Intention of Acting As Spy Says Desire To Taste Night Life Involved Her

New York, Nov. 10 (P)—A doe-eyed German frau, on trial as a spy for Hitler's third Reich, swore in federal court today that she unwittingly had become involved in espionage through a desire to taste New York night life.

The witness, Johanna ("Jenni") Hofmann, 26, red-haired former beauty salon operator on a German liner, is on trial with two co-defendants, Erich Glaser, 28, one-time U. S. army air corps private, and Otto Hermann Voss, 38, an airplane mechanic.

All face maximum sentences of 30 years in prison under the World War espionage act.

Miss Hofmann testified that she became friendly with Karl Schlueter, scar-faced "Fuhrer" of the liner Europa's crew and alleged "contact" man of a spy ring, only because he promised to take her to a cabaret here while her ship was in port.

But invariably he defaulted on his promise, she said, after using her as a "decoy" accomplice on visits to other members of the ring.

She said they visited Dr. Ignatz T. Griebel, former German Bund leader, now a fugitive in Germany, and Guenther Gustav Rumrich, 32, U. S. army deserter, who has confessed his espionage activities and testified for the government.

She acknowledged that she carried letters and other documents when she went on Schlueter's rounds with him, and said that when finally her suspicions were aroused and she pleaded with him to let her alone, he threatened her.

Trial was adjourned until Monday.

Dayton Schools To Reopen Nov. 21

Board Takes Action After Reports Funds Will Be Available

Dayton, O., Nov. 10 (P)—The Dayton Board of Education voted tonight to reopen the city's schools Monday, Nov. 21, on the basis of a report that $430,000 could be made available for operations. The schools had been closed since Oct. 28 because of a financial crisis.

Otto Craggs, an advocate of a "pay-as-you-go" policy, cast the lone vote of the seven member board against resuming classes for the city's 34,000 pupils and 1,000 teachers.

Superintendent Emerson Landis immediately announced that school athletic officials would meet tomorrow to resume the cancelled football schedules and other athletic activities.

Many Attend Meeting

In contrast to the two visitors present when the board ordered the schools closed in a special session Oct. 26, more than 200 crowded into the meeting room for tonight's decision on a plan prepared by Probate Judge William C. Wiseman.

Under the plan the money will come from four sources: $38,000 from real estate tax distribution, on or before Nov. 12; $112,000 from tangible personal property taxes, Nov. 29; $32,488 reimbursement by the state for local teaching of handicapped children; and $247,745 from the state school foundation fund. The Huntington National bank of Columbus has agreed to accept the foundation certificates.

$61,000 Shortage

The schools were ordered closed when the board found a $61,000 deficit and no prospect of further income until the regular quarterly distribution of the state funds.

Richard Withrow, the only board member to oppose the closing at the time, immediately sought an injunction against the order, asserting the teachers should have been kept at their posts. He assailed what he called the "frills and furbelows" of modern education.

City authorities turned to the state for help but were informed that neither an advance on the regular funds nor an increase could be granted. The foundation fund has a $17,000,000 deficit.

Boyd Ends Life In Summer Cottage

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 10 (P)—Coroner Benjamin F. Redman held today that William Henry Boyd, 55, Washington, had taken his own life by hanging himself in a closet in his summer cottage.

Boyd's body was found by state policemen who visited the cottage in response to a broadcast request by Washington police for aid in locating the man who disappeared from his home yesterday morning.

Police said he left home at the customary time enroute to his office in the income tax division of the department of justice.

His failure to keep an appointment for conferences with representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue on income tax matters started the search.

Officials of his office notified his family of his failure to report for work.

The Next Governor of Maryland and His Family

THE WINNER—Gathering in the living room of their home Wednesday, the members of the family of Herbert R. O'Connor read the good news which will make it necessary for the O'Connors to move to Annapolis for the next four years. Mr. O'Connor, piling up a majority of more than 67,594 votes in the state over Gov. Harry W. Nice, was overwhelmingly elected as the next Governor of Maryland. His majority was the largest ever given a candidate for governor in the state.

Turkish President Loses Hard Fought Battle with Death

"Father of the Turks" Did Much To Modernize His Subjects

Istanbul, Nov. 10 (P)—Kamal Ataturk who built and ruled modern Turkey with a clenched fist died today at the age of 58.

There were unconfirmed reports that the Turkish President whom parliament named Ataturk—"father of the Turks"—had left a political testament to guide his successor in his own rigid doctrine of westernization and nationalism.

No one expected Turkey's new leadership to turn in the immediate future from the domestic and foreign balance which Ataturk achieved for this nation, strategically situated between the east and the west.

Before Ataturk became gravely ill in mid-October he was borrowing money for Turkey with little discrimination from both Britain and Germany, although his early struggle for power was tinged with bitter hatred for the influence of both.

Interest in Successor

The British and German foreign offices were known to have keen interest in his successor and the future course of Turkey.

The president of the National Assembly, Abdul Halik Renda, assumed the interim presidency upon the passing of the ashen-faced "Gray Wolf." The assembly was convoked to elect a new chief executive, probably tomorrow.

General Ismet Inonu, known as the "military bookkeeper," premier for 13 of the 15 years that Ataturk headed the state, was the most likely choice.

Day and night eight physicians had helped Ataturk fight his illness in the great alabaster palace on the Bosphorus from which Ataturk had ejected the last Sultan of the old Ottoman Empire.

But the rugged spirit of this man who had always lived as he liked—hard and fast—failed him in the second crisis of two months.

He died after 12 hours of coma of cirrhosis of the liver.

Permission Denied For Erection of Generating Plant

Potomac Lt. and Pr. Co. Ordered to Supply Electricity

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 10 (P)—The Hardy County Light and Power Association was denied permission to erect a generating plant today in a Public Service Commission order which directed the Potomac Light and Power Company to furnish the Cooperative with electric energy.

The order, from which chairman John J. D. Preston dissented, granted the R.E.A.-financed cooperative a certificate of public convenience and necessity and barred it from extending its lines into four sections of Hardy county.

Granting of the certificate follows:

ed the precedent set by the commission in the Harrison County Cooperative's case, holding such associations are public utilities and subject to regulation.

The commission indicated orally at the close of the hearing in Moorefield that it would grant the certificate but exclude the cooperative from some parts of the county.

Set out in today's order as the territory of the Potomac Light and Power Company were the sections around Lost River, Kessel, South Fork, Barsore and Bean Settlement.

Equipped to Extend Lines

The Potomac concern had protested granting the certificate on the grounds it was equipped to extend its lines in Hardy county.

Today's order directed the company to furnish the cooperative with power at a rate not in excess of that prescribed for such service by the commission in the Harrison County Rural Electrification Association case last summer.

Neither the Cooperative nor the Potomac Company may extend facilities or lines in any way that will compete with each other.

Preston's dissenting memorandum asserted he believed the public interest would have been better served by requiring the extension of the existing concern's lines instead of the creation of the new Cooperative.

"I fear we are creating a hodge-podge of electric development in portions of Hardy County, unequal for, unjustified, and contrary to the legislative mandate and to all sound principles of economic construction engineering and development."

Prisoner Extradited

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 10 (P)—Virginia's request for the return of C. M. Canterbury, now held at Charleston, was honored today by Governor Holt. Grundy, Va., authorities charged Canterbury with embezzlement of about $600.

1939 Motorcars on Display Today New Models are "Smarter"; Big Year Predicted

New York, Nov. 10 (P)—Motorcars of 1939, in gleaming contrast to the first "horseless carriage" that startled America 40 years ago, will go on display tomorrow at the national automobile show in Grand Central Palace.

"The buying public will pay on an average four percent less for the 1939 automobile—and get a much better car in many respects," said Alfred Reeves, vice-president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association.

A preview of the show disclosed a trend toward smarter appearance, greater comfort and increased safety.

In style, the "car of tomorrow" shows narrowing hood effects with graceful "prows," plated grilles cast in non-rusting zinc alloy, headlamps recessed in fenders; roomier baggage compartments in the rear; larger windshields and, in many instances, no runningboards.

The nation's automobile chiefs enthusiastically hailed the 1939 car outlook.

K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corp., said it is indicated automobile output during the 1939 model year in the United States and Canada will range between 2,750,000 and 3,500,000 passenger cars and trucks, compared with a probable total of 2,225,000 units in 1938.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., said there is a better demand than a year ago.

J. R. Davis, general sales manager of Ford Motor Co., said Ford anticipated "an increase of 50 percent" in sales of its 1939 models, compared with 1938 model year.

Harry J. Klinger, general manager of Pontiac motors division of General Motors, announced his company had revised its 1939 car production upward, and that Pontiac factories were now operating on a basis of 190,000 to 200,000 cars for the model year, against 150,000 planned for 1939 last June.

Hear Testimony in CCC Fire Tragedy

Emporium, Pa., Nov. 10 (P)—A coroner's jury of six veteran woodsmen heard final testimony today on the deaths of eight CCC workers in a forest fire October 19, studied the evidence briefly and then adjourned until Saturday.

District Attorney Edwin W. Tompkins recalled several supervisors at the camp for testimony about CCC regulations concerning emergencies; read the statements of two youths who could not attend the hearing and questioned several other enrollees, who gave testimony similar to accounts related by other workers who fought the blaze on Pepper Hill.

Roosevelt's Downfall

AS straggling returns continue to swell the size of the Republican vote, the full extent of the disastrous blow dealt the New Deal crackpot machine at Washington and in a dozen state capitals by the Republican party on Tuesday amazes those who persisted in misjudging the real caliber of the American people.

Crackpotism has been shattered beyond repair, and from now on this nation will make rapid strides in its return toward constitutional government of the simple pure American brand, with no communist or totalitarian trimmings.

Where Roosevelt and Company made their great mistake was in assuming that the votes of the unfortunate on relief, on the WPA and dependent on various other government agencies for their existence—due to the failure of the Big Crooner to deliver the prosperity he promised them in 1932—could again be purchased as they were in 1936. The American voter can be fooled once, but when the perpetrator of the outrage tries it the second time, he invariably gets it where Roosevelt got it on Tuesday.

The roster of states which repudiated the New Deal on Tuesday is a portent of what is to come in 1940. Wisconsin, for more than thirty years the seat of LaFolletteism—perhaps the last on which, more than the others, the New Deal was founded—has kicked Brother Phil from the governorship, and elected Republicans governor and United States senator. Wisconsin is on the way back to the sanity, lack of which has wreaked havoc with its industries.

The outstanding triumph for the American form of government was, of course, registered in Pennsylvania, where all sorts of coercion, vote-buying, grafting, appeals to class hatred and mud-slinging were indulged in by New Dealers in a vain attempt to complete the job of wrecking a great industrial state so ably begun by them during the last four years. In an attempt to build up a vast political monopoly, Harrisburg was swamped with the tens of thousands of new state jobholders added to the state payroll by Earle. In electing Judge Arthur H. James to succeed the playboy as governor, Pennsylvania turned to a true Republican. James is of the genuine brand of Republican which it has always been easy to distinguish from the pinkish variety which New Dealers have been telling Republicans they must run for office if they are to suit New Dealers.

The list is a lengthy one: Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota—states which have had enough promises by crooners and are now enlisted in the war on the New Deal.

Particularly refreshing also is the downfall of Stogie Murphy in Michigan, who carried out Roosevelt's orders during the sit-down strikes in the auto industry a year and a half ago, ushering in the Roosevelt panic. Murphy's removal from public life is one of the most salutary things that occurred on Tuesday. Roosevelt's frantic last-minute efforts in behalf of Murphy no doubt swelled the vote against him.

There is growing revolt against Roosevelt crackpotism in the ranks of the Democratic party which is almost certain to unseat Roosevelt from control in 1940, if not sooner, but a belated housecleaning of the Democratic ranks is not enough. No Democrat, elected in 1940, however sane, could undo what Roosevelt has done. The army of parasites feeding at Washington would remain intact. The hordes of spies, investigators, and general all around pimps now overrunning the country would continue to plague honest people under any Democrat who could be named. The interlocking character of the New Deal is so deep-rooted that only a change of parties can dig it out.

The Democratic party had an amazing opportunity when it was voted into office in 1932, but it was destined to fail because it had permitted Franklin Disastrous Roosevelt to snatch the presidential nomination at the Chicago convention. Outstanding Democrats warned against his nomination, businessmen of all varieties feared his nomination, and the free and independent press which he has consistently attacked during his boondoggling career in the White House was all but unanimous in opposing his ascendancy to the Presidency.

Well, the calmer elements were right, as they always are, and the lunatic fringe which insisted the way to go forward was via crackpotism now stands repudiated, but it took six long years to do it—six years that have been lost from the lives of every citizen of this nation.

Heartening as is the outlook for the future, it is a permanent blot upon the intelligence of the American people that Roosevelt was ever permitted to promise his way into the White House. Six valuable years have been lost while the depression has continued and taxes and national debt have mounted to dangerous heights.

There would be no depression in the United States today except for the fact that Roosevelt has been in the White House for the last six years.

The job so ably started by the voters on Tuesday is not finished. It will only be finished when Roosevelt is replaced in the White House in January, 1941, by a Republican, and a Republican majority succeeds the reduced Democratic majority in Congress. Only then will business really start to function as it must if the American people are to be again prosperous.

Fraudulent operation of voting machines is charged in Indianapolis. It was probably just another attempt to hit the jack pot.

Not the Last Shot

TWENTY YEARS AGO the guns ceased to thunder on the Western Front. This, a hopeful world was told, was the Last Shot. And many believed.

Two decades later we know all too well that it was not the Last Shot. On the twentieth anniversary of the armistice, guns thunder in the Far East and in Spain, not far from that Western Front where the guns were stilled on November 11, 1918.

There is sure to be plenty of moralizing and plenty of blame-alotting on this anniversary. The moralizers' favorite scapegoats are the statesmen who framed the treaty of Versailles. They are blamed for the rise of the various "isms" and ideologies which have cursed the world of recent years.

Yet among those who most bitterly blame the Versailles conferees for not making the world safe for democracy are many who would consign democracy to the scrap heap in favor of one or the other of the "isms" or ideologies. And believers in democracy, who join in denouncing the peacemakers of 1919, seem to forget that the processes of democracy played a large part in thwarting a real peace.

To illustrate: Woodrow Wilson, author of the famous phrase, thought that he could make the world safe for democracy by his League of Nations. But the American democracy rejected his plan and refused to join the league of its own President's making. So the league began life disowned by the nation which gave it to the world.

And so it was with the representatives at Versailles of the other democratic powers. Clemenceau had to think not of peace as an abstract ideal, but of a peace treaty which would satisfy an apprehensive French democracy, mindful of two German invasions in four decades. Lloyd George had to think not of the good of the whole world, but of what the voters of the British democracy would deem good. And so it went.

But it does not necessarily follow that Versailles proved democracy incapable of evolving just international agreements. If we think the treaty of Versailles a bad treaty let us pause to consider how much worse a treaty would have been evolved by three dictators sitting where Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George sat.

Again Emphasized

THE CLOSENESS AND UNCERTAINTY of the race for the election of a Sixth district United States representative again brings forcibly to mind the need for a revision of the system of tabulating the Maryland election returns.

Other states have more efficient and expedient systems for doing this work. The voting machines are, of course, the ideal plan, but their initial cost will likely prevent their use in most of the county districts for a long while as yet. The experience with them in Baltimore City, certainly demonstrates their utility as well as accuracy to say nothing of the reduction in fraudulent voting. The machines count the votes as an adding machine, or a cash register, and when the polls close all that is necessary to do to obtain the result is to look at the collected totals.

The double election boards are a practical and inexpensive plan for getting the returns promptly. This system calls for a division of the poll officials into two groups, one being a receiving board and the other a counting board. When a certain number of votes have been cast, usually fifty, the counting board proceeds to the work of tabulation. When the polls close there is but little of this work to be done and the results are obtained within a short time. This is a good plan, which ought to be adopted in Maryland especially for the election precincts having large registrations.

The Common Things

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The most interesting things in this world are the common things. . . . They are the most bewildering, the most mystifying.

You take a glass and hold it beneath a tap and fill it with clear water. Lift it to the level of your eyes, slosh it a bit, look through it. . . . There's a miracle. Water that flows down the brown hills and over the stones and stops in ponds and runs to the sea and rises again in the heat of the sun and forms clouds and descends in the rain and hail and snow and is beautiful always. Set it down in chemical symbols—two parts of hydrogen, one part of oxygen—but the wonder of it remains.

Pick a green leaf. Observe the thinness, the veining, the coloring of it. Admire it. . . . Here's a great engine of change and growth, of life and death. There's chlorophyll in it, "essential in the formation of carbohydrates by photosynthesis." . . . More wonderful, really, than the most complicated of flowers.

Hold a bit of iron in your hand. . . . So solid, so hard, so massive. . . . But in that stubborn core is immense activity, tremendous spaces. Electrons whirl and collide and were you tiny enough you could travel forever within that great universe on some infinitesimal airplane and fly for millions of years and never come to earth. . . . There's a marvel in that heavy substance, in any strong material, almost beyond the human understanding.

All simple things are fascinating. . . . And a simple, elemental human being is stranger of all. A common, ordinary mortal who does not lift his head in the clouds but does his daily work and lives for the common joys and suffers the common agonies, and yet is serene and easy to live with is wisely philosophical about himself and the strange ways of this world.

There's a rebuke for you, too, my Masters, when you fuss and fume and rail against the restrictions of this world. . . . Bend down and give a thought to the common things, to fire and water and leaves and iron and common people who are wiser than you will ever be.

Fair Enough

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Those who grew up in certain parts of the Middle West in the first fifteen years or so of this century have first-hand knowledge of religious intolerance and generalized hatred and slander. The Catholics were the victims then and, of many publications devoted to the incitement of evil belief about them, the most savage and ruthless was a weekly called the Menace, which was published in Aurora, Mo. The Menace had a large circulation, and there came occasional rows in country towns and even in some of the cities over attempts to place the Menace on the reading tables of the public libraries and attempts by the Catholics to exclude it as a scurrilous and defamatory publication.

The Catholics, as taxpayers, were unwilling to entertain such attacks on their religious faith and slanders on the chastity of their mothers, wives and sisters in tax-supported libraries. The anti-Catholics replied that the Catholics were trying to suppress the truth and attack the freedom of the press.

There were lectures on the loose, usually calling themselves reverend or that, who would discuss from the pulpits of Protestant churches and in public hall and tents a deep and mysterious conspiracy against the safety and sovereignty of the country by which the Pope was to be enthroned in the White House. Normally calm and reasonable Americans of fair intelligence would permit themselves to be whipped into a tremulous state of rage and alarm by fantastic lies, delivered as solemn fact, to the effect that every Catholic church was an armory and arsenal and that the Catholics were only awaiting the night when they would get the word from Rome to steal out and slay their neighbors in their sleep.

Appeal to Reason

Even worse were the innuendoes about the mysteries of the confessional and shocking conduct in the convents. Against such propaganda the Catholics could only appeal to the reason of their neighbors and let the daily life and conduct of themselves and their clergy stand as their defense. But it was very trying, because the propagandists were grossly ignorant and wicked professionals without other means of support.

A particularly strong count in the campaign was the charge of internationalism. Catholics were accused of giving allegiance to the Pope in political as well as spiritual matters and were said to be unpatriotic to this or any other country of which they were citizens. There was a way of saying that a man was a Catholic which conveyed the meaning that he was—well, after all, a Catholic candidate for office was voted down because of his religion and all that that meant to people who had heard and believed the propaganda.

As a natural reaction Catholics would support men of their faith without particular regard for their fitness. They were driven together. Among the documents in circulation was a fake version of the oath of the Knights of Columbus, which, nevertheless, found many credulous believers, like the fraudulent so-called protocols of the Elders of Zion which are used in cycles of time and passion to arouse similar suspicion and hatred of the Jews.

Wounds Heal Readily

There were also "confessions" of persons who claimed to have been priests and nuns, and these, too, were influential in creating bitterness and doubtless will be used again. For such writings apparently never die, and all such movements are attended by sales of documents which appeal to the prurience of low people and permit them to indulge an appetite for obscenity in the guise of revelation.

Such campaigns take strange slants, and by an odd quirk the Masons are now condemned, suppressed and persecuted in Italy and Germany on the ground that they, too, in their brotherhood with the Masons of other lands, are divided in allegiance, unreliable and unpatriotic.

The wounds heal readily once agitators cease to exasperate them. People forget suspicion and beliefs against their neighbors which have no basis in their own experience with them but are derived only from oratory and writings. And the victims are glad to settle down again to normal relations. But the waves rise and fall—rise and fall for some fathomless reason deep in the nature of man.

He Upset Murphy

Serious of mien, Frank D. Fitzgerald, Republican, is pictured at Grand Lodge after defeating Frank Murphy for governor. Defeat of Murphy, personal friend of the president, was seen as a blow to the New Deal.

A CHANGE IN DRIVERS

Election Results Are Viewed As Swift, Strong Tide Just Getting Momentum

West Virginia Tree Crop

From the Morgantown W. Va. Post

Considerable sentiment is developing in West Virginia for the adoption of an enlightened State policy of forest protection and replacement. This fact was seen in the recent publication of a special bulletin on this subject by the West Virginia Coal Association, which pointed out that the coal industry is interested in a dollar-and-cents way in a continuing supply of mine timber.

When a State is faced with the vanishing of great natural resources that could be reproduced and maintained, it ought to be alert. We can do nothing to replace such natural resources as oil, gas, and coal. When they are gone, they will be gone forever, as far as we are concerned.

But forests are essentially a long-time crop. They can be replaced. If a seedling tree is planted when a fully developed tree is cut down, the seedling in time will grow a great tree's estate. In that way, the forest sources of the State can constantly be replenished.

We do not know the details of a State policy that would adequately meet this need, but in some states the problem has been solved, and in a number of European countries an even better solution has been found. Out of this experience, we ought to learn something, and we ought to make a start along lines that will give us the benefit of tree crops on that great part of our area which is suitable for the growing of no other crops.

We hope that the many agencies of the State which are interested in this subject and which have the necessary information will get together and suggest a workable program to the Legislature for its consideration this winter.

"Include Me Out"

From the New York Herald Tribune

Mr. Sydney F. Markham, of Oxford, author of learned books about museums, has found another aspect of Anglo-American relations to worry about. Wearing knee pants, he arose in the House of Commons and viewed with alarm what may happen to the King's English as a result of the forthcoming visit of the King and Queen to the United States. Declaring that "through radio and film we are acquiring what might almost be described as a trans-Atlantic idiom, he referred particularly to that stirring American phrase 'include me out.' He predicted that the day would come when the 'no' lobby in the House of Commons would be referred to officially as the 'include me out lobby.'

Well, why not? The phrase, in a very short time, has swept America, and the fact that it has now crossed the seas is only an evidence of its strength and aptness. But let us give credit where credit is due. The original author of the phrase, the best researches indicate, was Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, the motion picture producer, who, finding himself unable to go along with his colleagues in a contemplated project, remarked with emphatic finality, "Gentlemen, include me out." Whereby Mr. Goldwyn joined the immortals.

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Nov. 10.—About the meaning of this election, it is difficult to infer much from precedent. Nothing exactly analogous to it ever happened before. The number of House seats gained by the Republicans—apparently somewhat over seventy—is not necessarily conclusive as a sign that the Republicans will win the presidential election of 1940. Time and again roughly as many seats have been gained by both parties in congressional elections which, like the present one, were in the middle of presidential terms. In 1922, in the middle of the Harding administration, the Democrats gained eighty-five seats. But that did not mean they were going to win the ensuing presidential election—it was won by the Republicans under Coolidge. In 1914, in the middle of Wilson's first term, the Republicans gained sixty-six seats. But that did not mean they were going to win the ensuing presidential election—it was won by the Democrats with Wilson as their candidate running for a second term.

An Impressive View

If we look at Tuesday's result in terms of percentages, we get an extremely impressive view. The Republicans started with ninety seats. They gained apparently somewhat over seventy. That is a gain of more than three-fourths. Rarely before has either party accomplished anything like that. The Republicans made a gain of about eighty percent in 1894—and it turned out to mean they were going to win the ensuing presidential election, the 1896 one in which McKinley beat Bryan. Certainly the gain of more than three-fourths made by the Republicans on Tuesday is the expression of a strong tide running in their favor—or running against the New Deal, whichever way you choose to express it. The situation suggests a swift, strong tide just getting momentum.

In terms of senators and governors, the Republican victory was extremely impressive. The Republicans have elected a senator or a governor or both in every state east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers excepting Maryland, Illinois and New York, with Indiana in doubt at this writing. In all three of the states last named, they came within a tiny fraction of success. Assuming the tide continues until 1940, the Republicans would control the North East as never before. In one sense they already do, for they have won Wisconsin away from the LaFollette dynasty that has had control for several political generations.

Third Party Finished

The defeat of Governor LaFollette in Wisconsin is much more than the gain of one governorship by the Republicans. It means a set-back or an end to what seemed a possibly formidable third party. The LaFollette's national progressive party, the only other third party that had candidates for governor or senator in the field anywhere was the Farmer-Labor party. And as the National Progressive Party was defeated in its home state, Wisconsin, so was the Farmer-Labor Party defeated in its home state, Minnesota. In both cases the defeat was administered by the Republicans. So far as President Roosevelt, or any one else, was relying on a third party in 1940, the reliance is seriously set back. America remains a two-party country.

Again, so far as Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal relied on the farm states so far as he dreamed of party resting on two bases, farmers and labor, the dream is seriously disturbed. Out of some twelve states that compose the farm belt, the Republicans elected senators or governors or both in seven states, and came near to victory in two more. The dream of the Democratic party made into a Farmer-Labor party is probably over.

Dewey May Be Exception
If the Republicans have achieved hope for 1940, who has emerged as new presidential material to take advantage of the hope? Both Mr. Taft who won the Ohio senatorship and Mr. Bricker who won the governorship have been considered available provided they won last Tuesday, as they did. There is additional material in other states. In New York the Republicans did not quite reach with the man whom many regarded as the best Republican possibility for 1940. Yet Mr. Dewey came within a very small fraction of winning. Ordinarily a man who runs for governor of New York and fails is not thereafter seriously considered for the Presidency. Mr. Dewey's nearness to victory may make him an exception. He has two years in which to continue to impress himself on the state and on the country through his office of district attorney.—Copyright, 1938.

Who Reads Editorials?

From the Watertown, N. Y. Times

President Roosevelt had an interesting meeting with the newspaper men last Friday. It was valuable, also for it brought out certain truths. He was apparently incensed because the New York Herald Tribune had an editorial entitled, "So What?" and based it on only a part of a statement which he made at a previous press conference.

Mr. Roosevelt had replied to a question as to a poll of 5,000 residents of Connecticut which showed 85 per cent of the voters answering "No" to the question: "Are you better off than you were two years ago?" He brushed it aside impatiently with a testy remark, "So what?" As a matter of fact, the poll was taken by the Republican State Committee in Connecticut, and in answering it Mr. Roosevelt said, "So what, considering the source?" The Herald Tribune answered Saturday with another editorial and asked the question: "Can it be that this is one of those instances when unpleasant truth has penetrated his armor of jovial evasion?"

Let that pass. The most important outcome of the discussion Saturday had to do with the President's statement concerning the "New York Times" editorial page. Mr. Roosevelt said the editorial page of "The New York Times" was the most widely quoted, but that its publisher, Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, had once told him a survey of "Times" readers indicated only eight per cent read the page. According to his story of this conversion, only four per cent read the editorials through Mr. Roosevelt has made this statement on other occasions.

To the statement Friday, "The New York Times" added the following editor's note: "There is no record of any survey such as the President refers to. At one time a check was made as to what feature was the controlling reason for subscribing to 'The Times', and it is believed that eight per cent of those replying gave the editorial page. This did not imply that only eight per cent read the editorial page."

Thus, not only the Herald Tribune stands corrected, but the statement of the President himself is corrected, and concerning a matter that has bothered some of us for some time past.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

We are shocked by latter-day perversions of justice, racketeers getting free, sensational "circus" trials, and shady lawyers' tricks. We bemoan the lost dignity and pulsance of the law. It might be worse—in fact it has been. The death of Pat Crowe, shabby old Bowery bum, who 38 years ago kidnapped Edward Cudahy, Jr., in Omaha, is a reminder of a trial which makes the most raffish of our modern court room work-outs a model of propriety and just procedure in comparison.

Crowe collected a $25,000 ransom and disappeared. Five years later he surrendered, at Butte, Montana. He all but confessed the kidnapping and the State had enough evidence to sink a battleship. The jury, after arguing seventeen hours, brought in a verdict of "not guilty." Pat went his way and in his old age caddled a living with his tear-jerking story of the reformed kidnaper who would save souls and rid the world of crime. If he ever did a day's work, it is nowhere on record. He cashed in both on sin and repentance.

An Interesting Item
The explanation of that verdict is an interesting item in the history of these democratic states. The fifteen-year-old Cudahy boy was the heir to the Cudahy meat-packing fortune. That was the day when old "Blood-to-the-Bride-Reins" Waite, governor of Colorado, "Socksless Jerry" Simpson of Kansas, and the lady who was urging the farmers to "raise more hell and less corn" all were going strong in the western farm belt. Like tumbleweeds in a gale, the hatred of big corporations was sweeping the prairies.

What this Omaha jury particularly hated was meat-packers. Crowe's admissions and all the evidence melted like a snowball in the heat of that prejudice. Crowe had threatened to burn the boy's eyes out with acid if he didn't get the money. There were no extenuating circumstances, no plea of insanity, no faulty indictment, no legal loophole of law or fact. The jury hated meat-packers. That was all there was to it. Previously, Crowe's accomplice, James Callahan, a former railroad brakeman, had been caught and tried, and acquitted for the same reason.

Disquieting Detail
The return engagements played in the courts by racketeers who, in the meantime, are doing business at the same old stand, has been a disquieting detail of modern law enforcement. But this, no doubt assessable to venal lawyers and politicians, has an entirely different clinical aspect, from the Crowe case. No longer do we find inflamed social issues sidestepping juries as they did in the Crowe trial, the Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone trial in Montana and other great criminal law tourneys of an earlier day.

J. Edgar Hoover, the G-man has done much to put law enforcement on its merits. He has not found it necessary to explore the intangibles of class, race or sectional prejudice as possible perverters of law. With our unique and growing, American system of "blue ribbon" juries we are isolating law enforcement from bigotry and prejudice. What troubles us now is the durable old "fix," which Mr. Hoover has found is apt to be in, now as in yesterday. Progress has been made in that, too, and in my opinion there has been a definite and encouraging advance in law enforcement since the boom days of thuggery at the peak of the bootlegging era.

A Jail Slammer
Thomas E. Dewey has signaled for America the social and political therapy of slamming this or that crook into the hoosegow, rather than in merely waving the flag and hymning the founding fathers. Not only in New York, but in a half dozen other states the election campaign has hinged on specific, localized, issues of political malfeasance, or the putative alliance of politicians with gangsters. In the view of this onlooker, this is one of the most salutary and hopeful political turns of many years. It is undeniably true that big-city political machines have shaded into outlaw gangs, sometimes so subtly that none could tell where one ended and the other began. National parties have invoked high principles, but they have done business with the boys in the back room. It may not be polite to point, but just now there is a lot of rude specification of politico-criminal sludgegery and from where we sit it looks like something to cheer about. It is a wholesome contrast to the windy and windy campaigning around the turn of the century, which could kick up a prejudice capable of prying loose a kidnaper.—Copyright, 1938.

300,000 Clothing Workers Demand 60 Percent Raise

CIO Union Seeks Increase in Minimum Hourly Rate

Pittsburgh, Nov. 10 (AP)—The CIO's Amalgamated Clothing Workers union decided tonight to demand a 60 percent increase in the minimum hourly wage rate which President Sidney Hillman estimated would affect more than 300,000 men and women workers.

Hillman said his executive committee decided to petition Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the new federal wage and hour law, to appoint a committee before which the union could present its demands that the clothing workers' minimum pay of 25 cents an hour be boosted to 40 cents.

Hillman said his union has more than 250,000 members in 42 states and that such a wage increase would affect at least 3,000 more persons.

The clothing workers group was one of the first arriving here for the first constitutional convention of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which opens Monday with about 500 delegates expected.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, and other leaders of the 46 affiliated unions and organizing committees, are to start working on an agenda for the convention tomorrow.

A few hours earlier today the executive committee of the CIO's United Auto Workers, behind closed doors, discussed plans for a new unionization drive for the more than 100,000 employees of the Ford Motor Company.

Homer Martin, UAW president, said no action had been taken "on the Ford question" but added "it is, however, on our agenda."

Cantigny Battle Is Re-enacted

Tanks Rumble, Artillery Roars At Silver Springs

Silver Springs, Md., Nov. 10. (AP)—Tanks rumbled over the hills of Silver park tonight; artillery roared; machine guns chattered; airplanes buzzed through the air and bombs burst in huge flames.

Through it all stood thousands of residents of Maryland and Washington, gathered for the most pretentious Armistice Day observation in the Washington district.

The battling, with flares lighting the scene and explosions shaking the ground, was a re-enactment of the battle of Cantigny.

That battle was one of the major engagements in which American troops participated in the World War.

Major General Hanson E. Ely, U. S. A., retired, commanding officer of the 28th infantry during the original battle was asked to sit with guests of honor at the re-enactment.

The actual battling started shortly after dark, but early troops had gathered in the peaceful valley in the North end of Silver Park, giving a war-time atmosphere to that region of quiet and attractive suburban homes.

Troops came from all parts of Maryland for the battle.

Fort Meade provided troops and tanks of the regular army.

National guardsmen joined from Washington units.

The twenty-ninth division, air force of the Maryland national guard, with headquarters at Logan Field, took part under command of Major Charles Mason.

Other Maryland units in the sham battle included: Company H, Westminster; Company M, Annapolis; Company A and Headquarters Detachment, Frederick; Company B, Hagerstown; Howitzer Company, Kensington; Service Company, Silver Spring; Company F, Hyattsville, and Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, Laurel.

Stationary Engineers And Firemen Meet To Form Association

The first meeting to organize an association of stationary engineers and firemen for Western Maryland was held here last night with 46 men attending.

W. D. Newberry, of the Memorial Hospital boiler room, was named temporary chairman of the organization. O. L. Biggs, of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co., temporary secretary, and Philip R. Lucas, of the Port Cumberland hotel, temporary treasurer.

A by-laws committee was elected consisting of O. L. Young, of the Cumberland Brewing Co.; F. L. Davis, of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co., and J. C. Edmunds, of the Celanese.

The purpose of the association, Mr. Biggs said, is to get the men together socially and to discuss experiences and mutual problems.

All interested persons in Allegany, Garrett and other nearby counties are asked to attend the second meeting Nov. 17, at the Eagles Hall on North Mechanic street.

Two hotels did a thriving business in Relay for many years, one known as the "Viaduct Hotel" attaining a considerable fame for its comfort.

Relay played its part, too, in the Civil War. Then it was a troop concentration camp—Union artillery was mounted on the bluffs to defend the viaduct and railroad, vital parts of the only north-south artery of transport for federal supplies.

But the hand of progress has intervened—Relay is no longer necessary, suburban populations have concentrated in other sections—said the B. & O. today "it is more convenient to serve the public at other nearby stations."

Jewish Property Worth Millions Is Destroyed By Mobs In Germany

"In numerous cities and communities of the Reich, acts of violence were committed against Jewish buildings and businesses.

"The entire population is now, however, strictly requested to desist immediately from all further demonstrations and actions of whatever nature against Jewdom. The final answer to Jewry will be given in the form of laws or decrees."

Munich Jews Must Leave

All Jews in Munich were told that they must leave the country within 48 hours, and many Jews feared that Goebbels' concluding statement was a threat that the Munich order would be made nationwide.

All of Vienna's 21 synagogues were reported burned, wrecked or damaged. Seven of Berlin's 20 synagogues were burned.

In Vienna, 22 Jews were said to have committed suicide. A number of Jews were arrested while they waited outside the British consulate seeking visas to England. A dispatch from Vienna said truckloads of Jews were taken by storm troops to Doliner street and put to work tearing down a synagogue.

In Munich, Aufreusers, the only remaining Jewish bank, was raided. One director and his wife committed suicide and another was taken to a concentration camp.

Violence in Cologne

Cologne crowds broke windows in nearly every Jewish shop, forced entrance into a synagogue, overturned its seats and smashed the windows.

The Salzburg synagogue was destroyed and shops of Jewish tradesmen were looted.

Potsdam, Treutlingen, Bamberg, Bayreuth, Everswalde, Brandenburg and Cottbus all reported synagogues raided, demolished or burned.

From early morning on, curious throngs milled up and down Berlin streets on which Jewish shops were situated or stood watching burning synagogues.

Mobs Invade Stores

Unhindered by police, the mobs invaded stores the windows of which had been broken during the night and helped themselves to furs, clothes, rugs, toys and other merchandise.

That scores of synagogues—burned, bombed and razed in various parts of Germany—were worth many millions alone stood beyond doubt.

The extent of damage to Jewish business also ran into millions of dollars.

badly in congress. At the same time, should the Republicans seek to undo major New Deal legislation already enacted, the possibility of a presidential veto and the necessity of mustering a two-thirds majority against Mr. Roosevelt in both houses was regarded as hanging over the conservative forces.

Thus, many thought the result depended upon Mr. Roosevelt's own interpretation of what the election meant, and his own decision as to what course he would follow. He could, such opinion ran, seek compromise and cooperation, or lay down the gauntlet and battle it out for two years leading up to the 1940 presidential election.

In predicting that the Democratic party might draft Mr. Roosevelt for a third-term effort, Secretary Icks said he based his view on the confusion of issues underlying Tuesday's elections.

Irwin Appears To Be Eccentric At Trial for Murder

Slayer of Three Twists in Chair as Jury Is Called

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Robert Irwin, the Easter-morn, 1937, slayer of three persons, twisted, grimaced and clenched and unclenched his fingers as his trial for murder proceeded slowly today with the addition of two jurors to the three selected Monday.

The erstwhile sculptor enacted the part of an eccentric by which defense counsel Samuel Liebowitz hopes to save him from the electric chair on the ground of insanity. Liebowitz admits Irwin killed Veronica Gideon, photographers model, her mother and a boarder in their Beekman Hill apartment.

The prospective appearance of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, who was defeated for the governorship this week, again figured. Liebowitz asked prospective jurors whether their judgment of the case would be influenced by Dewey's expected participation in the prosecution.

At the last session, before election, Liebowitz had questioned talesmen carefully about possible connections with Dewey's campaign.

None of those questioned today thought Dewey would influence them, already two were excused because they knew members of the prosecution staff.

Liebowitz centered his questions to talesmen on whether they had any predetermined idea of how an insane man looked ("—in a straight jacket—foaming at the mouth—running amok")—and whether they thought Irwin should be executed regardless of his possible insanity, to protect society.

Recount Asked For Republican in Indiana

Indianapolis, Nov. 10 (AP)—Arch N. Bobbitt, Indiana's Republican state chairman, announced tonight he would demand a recount of the vote for United States senator between Raymond E. Willis (R) and Senator Frederick Van Nuys (R) in four counties.

Bobbitt, in a prepared statement, said he had "reason to believe, on a basis of personal investigation, that a recount of the vote" would be justified in those counties.

The count from 3,862 of the state's 3,872 precincts in the senatorial race gave Van Nuys 780,825 and Willis 775,335.

In addition to the half dozen congressional seats which they wrested from Democrats, the Republicans re-elected Rep. Charles A. Halleck from the second district, thus gaining seven of Indiana's twelve places in the national house. Halleck has been the state's only G. O. P. congressman for the last four years.

The 63-year-old Willis refused to concede defeat.

"I'm not conceding anything," he said upon arriving here from Angola, where he publishes a weekly newspaper.

20 Years After Defeat Germany Is Near Mastery of Central Europe

hard to believe this transformation is reality.

"Now the victors are vanquished," he says, "and those who threw down their arms in the field and sued for Armistice are striding on to world mastery. . . . Historians a thousand years hence will still be baffled by the mystery of our affairs."

Germany Stripped of Arms
After the war came the peace of Versailles, in which Germany was stripped of her arms and colonies and forced to turn over territories to Poland, France, Denmark, Lithuania, Danzig, Belgium and Czechoslovakia.

The peace set up the League of Nations, destroyed the Austro-Hungarian empire, and established Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Poland, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

Designed to free the world from war, the league was bound to give "mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small nations alike."

Many Changes in 20 Years
Now, at the end of the post-war era, Czechoslovakia is dismembered, Japan continues her drive against China, Hitler's economic way is creeping eastward along the Berlin-Baghdad route that has been the German imperial dream since Bismarck, and the world is arming at a tremendous cost—$14,000,000,000 a year in comparison with the $3,500,000,000 before the war.

Today, two decades after the Armistice, Germany holds slightly more territory in Europe than she did before the war but has yet to regain her war-lost 1,000,000 square mile colonial empire. Her economic penetration of Southeastern Europe goes forward rapidly, and her plans for the future worry the world.

Pershing In Armistice Day Plea Urges Stronger National Defenses

wide observance of a day of peace which is overshadowed this year by reminders of war.

By an act of Congress, the anniversary of the World War's end is a national holiday for the first time. President Roosevelt, Pershing, as general of the armies, and representatives of a score of patriotic organizations will lay wreaths on the tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington national cemetery.

To meet what he described as the requirements of national defense "promptly and without excitement," General Pershing said, "is, in my opinion, the most important duty that confronts the American people on this twentieth anniversary of the armistice."

"The performance of that duty should preserve our peace, and if that proves impossible will enable us to be secure behind our defenses," he added.

"More than this, it will bring home to other governments our strength, and will pave the way for reduction in armaments, which is the wish of all of us who hate war."

"The armistice twenty years ago ended the greatest war in history. We in America are proud of the record of our armies in that terrific struggle, and we cherish the memory that they were the decisive factor in the defeat of the common enemy."

$170,000,000 Ready For Midwest Farmers

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The AAA made ready today to pour out a huge sum—estimated at about $170,000,000—to assure Midwestern corn farmers who complied with its crop control program an income of about 10 cents more than current market prices.

Secretary Wallace announced that corn produced in the commercial cornbelt by complying farmers and withheld from market could be stored on farms under a 57-cent government loan. A 50-cent loan was made on last year's crop.

The federal crop reporting board estimated the 1938 production at 2,480,988,000 bushels, compared with 2,644,995,000 last year and an average of 2,306,157,000 during the 1927-36 period.

The law calls for a loan of 70 percent of the "parity" price now about 81 cents—if the official November crop estimate exceeds a normal year's domestic consumption and export needs by not more than 10 percent. Wallace estimated such consumption and export needs at 2,218,000,000 bushels.

Surety Company Loses Fight Over Illegal Operation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—A surety company lost its court fight today for separation from a pending damage suit at Danville involving a charge of illegal operation.

The United States fourth circuit court of appeals affirmed and remanded for further proceedings a lower court's ruling against a motion for an interlocutory injunction made by the Aetna Company and Surety Company. The surety company has sought a declaration decree adjudicating that policy issued by it to Dr. W. C. Yeatts, of Danville, did not cover a claim asserted against the physician by the administration of the estate of Elizabeth W. Burton, deceased.

The surety company claimed that under provisions of its policy issued to the physician it was not liable for damages and was under no obligation to defend the doctor, charged with attempting an illegal operation.

By HELEN FOLLETT

COMES THE evening, comes the hurry-up summons to join the merry evening party. And look at your finger nails! Haven't had a manicure for a week! And maybe you've been digging out closets or messing around with house plants or polishing silver. Very sad.

Get out the manicure kit. Remove the high polish. Use the flexible nail file for shaping, pass the orange wood stick under the eaves to bring out little shreds of inner substance, and do a second shaping with the emery board. So far, so good.

Give the little mitts a soapy scrubbing, using a nail brush. Rinse with tepid water and dry. Apply a cuticle cream to soften the flesh, then lift it with the orange wood stick. If you have worked up hangnails, nip them away gently and carefully with the curved, needle-point scissors. Use your nail pencil under the nail eaves. If you haven't a pencil, dip the stick in soap suds and use it. Wash the hands again, dry thoroughly.

Apply the nail glitter, sweeping the camel's hair brush from nail base to nail tip, wiping the glow away if it trickles into the sides of the nails. Friction perfume into the palms of your hands.

All that shouldn't take more than 15 minutes.

A woman may not have a large bust and still have a roll of flesh beneath it. This beauty curse makes for awkwardness of line and should be overcome.

The cure is in better posture, pulling up of slack tissues. An exercise that will do the work is this: Lie on the back on the floor. Place the feet under a heavy piece of furniture. Lift the body to a sitting position without using the hands, lower it slowly. It's not easy.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or severe passages with smarting and burning show that your kidneys may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acid or poisons in your blood, when due to kidney or bladder disorders, may be the cause of leg pain, rheumatism, backache, leg pain, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Dam That Was Built By Early Padres Found

San Diego, Calif. (AP)—Possibly the first dam ever built in the western United States has been located on the San Diego river. It is two miles above old Mission San Diego de Alcalá and has been attributed to work by the Padres about the year 1790.

For years the dam was covered by boulders and silt, but recent flood waters uncovered it. It is on the ranch of Ernest Briden, who reported his find to city authorities.

Wants Jail Watchdogs

Sacramento, Calif. (AP)—Prison breaks and other convict disturbances would be much fewer if guards were provided with dogs, says Marcus Monk, a trainer. Convicts who are willing to take a chance in assaulting a guard would think twice before risking attack from a trained dog, Monk contends.

ROMANCE IN

BY OREN ARNOLD

READ THIS FIRST:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young woman, is a student at the campus of the Institute in Towson, where she is a member of the "COUNCIL IN ROMANCE" which is to help guide the student members in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, much attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another problem when it is evident he is interested in Sara Sue. The climax in her cottage, Peaches' house, when she finds Sanders' dog at Sara Sue's feet, is a local football game. The girl, of course, is Sara Sue herself. Bob finds Sanders' dog at Sara Sue's feet, and begins to suspect he has a new rival. Sanders, much taken by Sara Sue, takes her to visit some dog kennel because she likes dogs, then makes other dates with her. Alone, she does some serious thinking about Sanders. Towne, Gurley and Dr. Holgate, Sara Sue gives Dr. Holgate more advice to help him with his courtship of Peaches. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 18

CLEOPATRA came in and Sara Sue left Dr. Holgate for a moment to give her a pointer or two regarding lunch. Meanwhile, her guest sat thinking. Thinking deeply.

"Oh, persimmons, Cleo!" "Yasum. It was some on the fruit canteen, and I remembered you all liked 'em. Just ones this season, the man say."

"Fine!" "Few fruits are more delicious than the wild Texas persimmon, touched to delectable sweetness by early frost. Sara Sue washed a dish of them and came back to the living room. Dr. Holgate, reared in Yankeeedom, had never tasted them before.

"Delicious," he declared. "Do you serve fruits to all your guests?" "No. You are special. I couldn't afford to, with all the students who have memberships here."

"You have 100 members, you said?" "Yes. You were No. 100, Thorny."

"How did you happen to conceive so clever an idea?" "Well, I don't know exactly. I just got to thinking. Mother and I had limited cash. She's Larry's mother, really, you know. But I love her very much. I could have hunted a downtown job. But, Thorny, I just didn't want to slave in some office or store for a few dollars a week!"

"No, indeed. I commend you for it. Your ingenuity is to be praised." "Well, I just happened onto it, I guess. I talked to my banker friend. And a lawyer. And just went into it. The plan has certainly worked out fine."

"Have you some special training for work of this sort, Sara Sue?" "No. None whatever. I just drew from my own background."

"Tell me about your background." "Well, I mean my love life, so far as this is concerned. You see, I knew—I absolutely knew—that love is very poignant when you are at college age. The colleges don't recognize that enough. It causes much trouble, much heartache. I was in love, and married, when I could have been a freshman. I don't mean to bring up my personal history that way, but it gave me this idea."

"And then I have seen my friends need help. So few people will try to understand boys and girls in love, don't you think? Usually they just laugh at them. That's wrong, Thorny. Love is—"

"Is magnificent, I guess. It is. It's extremely important. It is what makes people happy or unhappy." Thornton nodded agreement.

"Have you—experienced romance—since?" He expressed genuine interest.

"Me? Oh! Well, no. That is, a couple of the fellows are kidding me a lot. Three of them really. You know about that, because Bob Towne talks all the time about the big silly. He's a dear boy, but I'm not in love with him. He goes around telling all the gang that I'm his girl, but everybody knows it doesn't mean anything. But you know, Thorny, a girl likes that."

"You were doing it on purpose?" "I think you deserve a lot of credit."

even so! It sort of tickles her vanity, I guess. She paused to giggle. "Quite so," Thornton agreed. Has he proposed marriage? If that's not too personal."

"Oh, no, I mean, I don't care if you ask. Yes, he has asked me a dozen times, I suppose. I just tease back at him. I will say one thing, though, he never tries to get too fresh or anything like that. I can't stand men that get too intimate. Have another persimmon, Thorny."

"Thank you. You mean you have other admirers, too?" "Yes, I mean, a couple of the boys are asking for dates some, and I enjoy going out with them. But there's nothing serious to either of them. I do not intend to get married again. What are your ideas on second marriage, Thorny?"

"What are yours?" "Well, I just don't know. I was terribly in love with Larry Davis. But it doesn't hurt to think about it now, and in fact I almost never think about it. Time does change things an awful lot. I was very young, then."

Sara Sue spoke as if she were a matron in her late fifties now. She was gazing seriously at her dog, Nightmare, who was stretched on the rug near her.

"But I am sure I could never be in love like that again. Or maybe I could, I don't know." Dr. Holgate was watching her closely.

"I think," said he, "that you deserve a lot of credit, for adjusting yourself as you have."

"Well, I just couldn't sit down and mope all my life."

"To be sure. And you doubtless enjoy the business end of your Cottage Plan."

"There's not much. Cleo is a good cook. She's loyal to me. Calculus does the heavy work—her husband, you know. Mother helps a great deal when she's here. For my part, I enjoy the constant house-party atmosphere."

"That's because you are young, isn't it?" "I guess so. I hadn't given it all at once Sara Sue Davis stopped."

She had been lifting a persimmon to her lips, but she held it now mid-way and stared at Dr. Thornton Holgate as if in consternation.

"Thor-n-y Hol-gate!" she suddenly exclaimed. "I just had it you!" There had been a twinkle in his eye. Now he burst into real laughter. He laughed more heartily, more naturally, than she had ever heard him before.

"You were doing it on purpose?" "I think you deserve a lot of credit."

"I think you deserve a lot of credit."

she exclaimed. "Weren't you? . . . Weren't you? . . . Weren't you just trying to make me talk about myself?"

"But you commanded me to!" he blushed, partly at his temerity, partly in gladness, at the success of his coup. "Did you not say I should lead other persons into talking of themselves? I knew your instructions to be sound. So I set in to apply them. And I am quite sure they worked admirably!"

He was as happy as if he had killed a bear. He had overcome shyness for one brief quarter hour. Now, if he could only master himself like that, get that same confident control of himself, when in the presence of Miss Pomeroy—

He discussed that yearning with Sara Sue. "You can!" she assured him. "You are a brilliant pupil, Thorny. You took the lesson right out of my hands. But after all, you DO have a Ph. D. degree. Weren't you Phi Beta Kappa, too?"

He nodded. "I thought I had seen your key. Well, you have the brains, of course. You had just gotten acquainted with me, enough to feel at ease. It's proof of what you can do. I am so happy for you!" She smiled admiringly at him.

Dr. Holgate left her cottage in a positive glow. He even whistled some as he walked across Main boulevard and back onto the campus. But there he encountered a fellow professor, and paused for a chat. Before he realized it he was his old self again. Stilted. Formal. Scholarly.

The other man happened to be old Pettigrew, of biology, who smelled eternally of dead animal matter anyway, and who was a social boor of 60-odd years. People said he was smart in his science, but he was weak otherwise. He exerted a counter-influence on Holgate, after the delightful session with Sara Sue.

Holgate moved on, feeling older. It occurred to him that he had perhaps made a fool of himself in the Davis cottage. Goodness, he couldn't afford to drift off in frothy details concerning women; he had cut himself out a scholastic career!

And yet, there was Miss Pomeroy. She was most powerful. Her trim, well-dressed figure, her dark hair and colorful features were etched deeply in Dr. Holgate's consciousness. He could not slough that off; in fact he did not want to.

He ambled on back toward the administration building, a somewhat badly confused young faculty man.

HOLD YOUR TONGUE

IF AN OPPONENT commits some irregularity, such as a lead out of turn or from the wrong hand in the case of dealer, you will do well to think a moment before speaking. Of course you do not play bridge primarily for the purpose of profiting from such occurrences. But neither do you wish to suffer unjustly from them, as you may if you speak at the wrong time or say the wrong thing in your haste.

North started the bidding on this deal with 1-Spade. South responded with 2-Heart. North bid 2-Spades. South 3-Diamonds. North 4-No Trump. South 5-Diamonds and North 6-Diamonds.

West's opening lead against this contract was the spade Q, which was won in the dummy with the K and a heart discarded. In his anxiety to try out the diamond finesse, South led the diamond Q, whereupon West shouted: "The lead is in dummy." Crestfallen, declarer felt his haste had ruined his chances for the slam, but he "took the bull by the horns" and laid down the diamond A. Imagine his joy when East's singleton K dropped. Declarer took two more rounds of trumps and forced out the heart A, which was the only trick the opponents cashed.

It is impossible to quote the remarks of East. When the diamond Q was led he knew the contract was doomed, but West's remarks handed the slam to the opponents.

Your Views Influence A Child

"Bad Suggestions of Parent Harmful for Youngster's Welfare"

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

THERE is no light on in the pantry and it is nearly dark. "I wish you would go to the pantry for some carrots," the mother asks.

Dan, who is five, starts off but soon returns with, "I'm too tired, Mother."

"Now, Dan, you know that you are fibbing; you're afraid. There's nothing there to hurt you."

Proper Procedure Suspecting fear in Dan, the mother should have accepted his explanation, without suggesting that he was afraid or was mistaking facts. She should have gone herself, or have offered him reward, or have induced the lad in some other way to choose to get the carrots. And this the mother would have done had she thought the matter through. Not on purpose did she make the child's problem harder for him; she just acted on the impulse, about as all the rest of us will do at times, I guess.

"I have brought this child in to you, Doctor, because she won't eat what she should. She just worries me to death. We have awful scenes at mealtime. She upsets the entire family. I thought you could tell me what to do."

There sat Sylvia, seven years of age, while her mother painted the foregoing picture. Sylvia never had a happier moment.

When you go to see your doctor about such matters, leave the child at home, at least for the first visit.

Be Careful of Remarks At the dinner table Toby drops remarks about the teacher, which indicate to you that she has done something you strongly disapprove. Now suppose you, by gesture or by speech, indicate that you are displeased at what the teacher is reported to have done. You do injustice to her, passing judgment from one-sided and, no doubt, biased testimony. You encourage Toby to engage in unkind remarks about persons in their absence; you demonstrate to the level of mere gossip; you make the child more critical of the teacher, and less ready to learn at school from her. You do damage to your child's character, impair his education, and you help to waste the tax money you have paid.

In case you feel that some things at school are not going well, wait a few days until you regain your poise, and then have a word with the teacher in the child's absence. Go to learn and reason, not to dictate and abuse. If you are a woman be a lady; if an man, a gentleman. It will pay.

Trips Like These Might Have Scared Columbus!

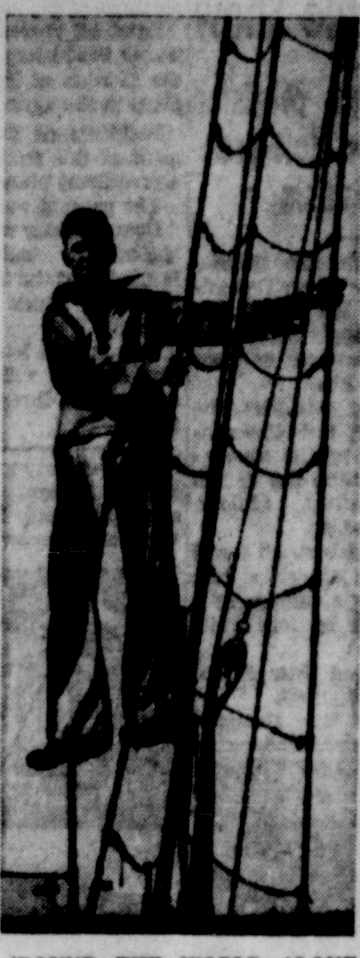

So the world's a hum-drum place—with steamships and airplanes crossing the oceans quickly, with radios keeping them in touch with the world? Is there no chance of getting real adventure?

Before you answer—look at these folks. They've just concluded voyages in wind-jammers even Columbus would have scorned.

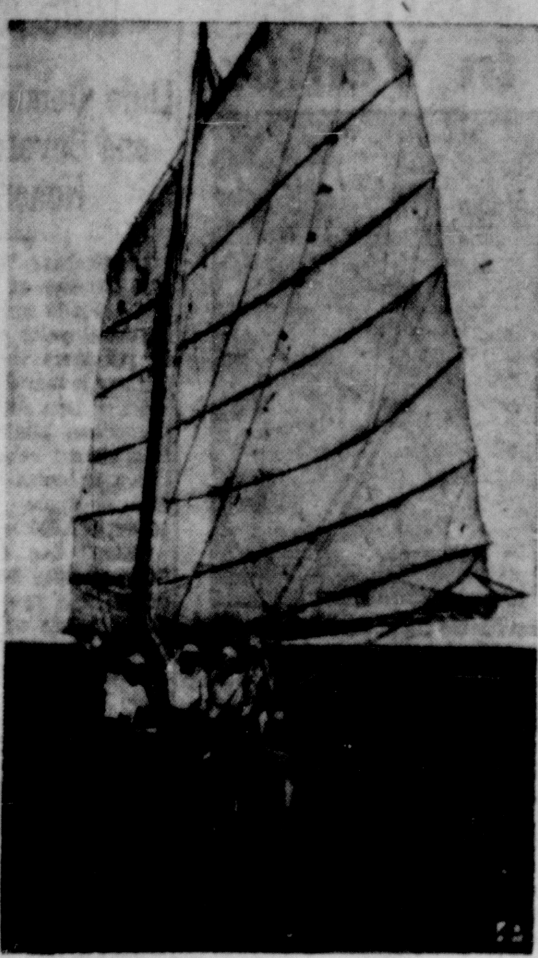

ALONG THE EQUATOR

Ray Kauffman in South Seas pants is shown bobbing along the equator in a 42-foot ketch he sailed 37,000 miles around the world with Gerry Mefford. On one island they say they traded 10-cent bars of soap for $15 pearls. Once they were beached; once winds ripped the mainmast shrouds. Both youths live in Des Moines. They built their own boat.

'ROUND THE WORLD ALONE

Skipper Dwight Long stands in the rigging of the little ketch that he sailed away from the depression and Seattle four years ago. He battled reefs, pirates and storms along the globe-girdling trail of 30,000 miles. Sometimes he carried passengers.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC IN A JUNK

The whiskered crew of this 36-foot Chinese junk was 85 days out of Yokohama when photographed near San Pedro, Calif. The trip was packed with danger from winds, waves and whales. They battled fog; their bobbing boat discouraged sleep—even the cook-stove jumped around. Dr. Allen Petersen, his Japanese wife, and two Russians, shown left, made the voyage.

Marriage Provides Average Person Real Happiness

Only the Exceptions to Rule of Life Content Without Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Copyright, 1938

"Is love a prime need of life," asks a young college woman who has broken her engagement for what she considers good and sufficient reasons.

Her idea, for the moment, is to go grimly through life without human affection, and to satisfy her heart hunger with a career.

There are, of course, exceptional people devoted to some absorbing and unselfish interests, who are able to do without personal love in the romantic sense, and who don't even seem to need it particularly. But most of us aren't like that.

There are others to whom life doesn't bring their heart's desire, however patiently they await it. To those disappointed ones, I shall have more to say some other day. What I'm urging now is that it's taking a big chance to give up love voluntarily.

Must Be Sound Life
It's not an easy thing for the average man or woman to lead a happy, useful life, unless he or she has a sound life—giving love on which to depend.

Those who achieve careers are in a group by themselves, and career men and women do marry, and many of them are happily married. Claire Booth, who has two highly successful plays to her credit, both of which are full of barbed epigrams about all human relations, leads a conspicuously happy domestic life. The late Madame Curie, our greatest career woman, was an ideally happy wife and mother.

Lady Astor and her husband, the more reserved Waldorf, have each managed successful careers. And there's, of course, the classic illustration of those ideal lovers, the Brownings. While we're on the subject of careers and happy marriage, let us not forget the Lindberghs.

The question of career or marriage is a question of choice.

riage simmers down to the amount of talent involved. Sufficiently gifted, a woman is safe in attempting both. It's the mediocre that fail by the wayside and lament that home, husbands and children prevent the world's recognition.

Strength Is Involved
Again, there is the question of physical strength involved. Not every woman is able to turn out books, plays, paint pictures, model statues, or engage in scientific work, and at the same time marry, maintain a comfortable home and bear children. The comic supplement housekeeping of the career woman has supplied the jokesmith with material for years.

Most women marry and work, and the work is not a "career". In itself, marriage is a pretty big career. In a survey of juvenile delinquency, the conclusion was reached, by those making the survey, that criminal tendencies were made by bad environment in the home.

To return to our correspondent, the young college girl, she is happily young enough to change her mind. As for the food of our inner lives—those are the precious ration that is a good deal more difficult and more dangerous to give up—far better than philandering after a career that is still in the uncertain stage.

He Hesitates to Propose
Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am 35 years old and have finally fallen in love with a girl of 25. But I hesitate proposing because I have a terrible habit of drinking at times and have never been able to cure myself. I acquired my liking for drink when I was in college. When in that condition, I'm down in the lowest depths. I'm not responsible for what I do.

My fiancée comes from a fine family, and never touches the stuff. In fact, they don't believe in it at all. The first time she saw me under the influence of liquor, she broke down—thought I was ill and was so sympathetic. She isn't aware that I have this weakness. When I fall I usually leave town and drink until I can't hold any more.

It seems unfair to marry this girl, and yet she says she loves me very much. I am so unhappy because I dread telling her.

whom I like and he's been coming to see me. He used to go around with a wild girl, but says if I'll go "steady" with him, he'll drop this girl. I'd like to reform him, so I'm going with both these boys. In fact, I am very fond of them.

I'm only 18, and am asking your advice. If my "fiance" knows about this second boy he might not like it, so I don't know what course to take. I don't want to give up either boy. Please print this letter.

JANET

I'm very glad to print your letter, as it proves that a girl who is independent has a better hold on a boy friend than the "doormat" type of girl. The latter type is forever accusing herself of all sorts of things against her boy friend, when the real truth is she's too good to him and is just spoiling him.

At 18 you have plenty of time to choose, and I wouldn't sign up with either for the time being.

She Wants the World to Know She's Engaged

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm very much in love with a young hospital interne. He's very brilliant, and has a promising career ahead of him. He has proposed to me and I've accepted, but my parents, who are very narrow-minded, have refused to announce the engagement because I'm only 17 years of age. We're quite anxious to announce our intentions to marry. Shall I obey my parents, or go ahead on my own? I'm not finished with my education yet.

LIVING IN HOPES

At 17 it's rather hard to agree with parents in a decision such as this. But you realize you're still young and in school. They undoubtedly think it would be a good idea to wait till you graduate from school, and until the interne is better established in a professional career.

Try to be patient and you'll see things will work out just fine, and you can have your announcement party after graduation.

Always Run Into Each Other "Accidentally"

Dear Miss Fairfax:
For no good reason at all we parted and didn't see each other for months. We had been steady pals for a couple of years before this happened. Right now we don't speak, but I believe each of us goes to the places where the other is sure to be. We're in the same school, and go to school on the same bus, but he comes home earlier than I do, as he has other classes. When I go to the movies with my girl chums, there he is across the aisle with his boy friends.

We're always running into each other "accidentally." Why is this? He never went with another girl, and he was my first boy friend. We're 17 and 16. And I still like him.

BETSY

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Six months ago I met a young man, who happened to make a business call on my employer. He said he fell in love with me at sight. I went out with him several times, and then he went back to his home office. Before leaving, however, he told me he was engaged and had expected to be married very soon. He said he had been engaged for several years, and that all plans had been made, even to selecting home and furniture. He told me he really loved his fiance until he met me, but felt that he'd made a mistake and would break his engagement. We've been corresponding ever since, and I feel as if I love him, too. He always tells me he loves me, and has been to see me several times in this last six months. But what bothers me is this: How do I know he really is to be trusted? If he was so sure he loved this other girl and then changed his mind overnight, what could I expect? Should I continue this friendship or just drift away gently, and perhaps save myself the same heart-break he must have caused the other girl. He is 27 years; I am 22.

EDITH

I'm not surprised, my dear, that you are in doubt about the steadfastness of a man who goes as far as selecting home and furniture for his coming marriage to another girl and then breaks the engagement, just because he fell in love with you at sight.

You do not tell me if, in the time that he has been coming to see you and corresponding, he has mentioned marriage or not. If he has not, I shouldn't take him seriously, nor consider myself bound in any way.

Why not just go along as you have in the past? If by the end of a year or so you still feel rather uncertain of him, and your plans are no more definite than at present, it would be a good plan to break away entirely.

Other Boys Don't Seem To Interest Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm in my third year high, and am very fond of a boy of 21, who is working his way through college, clerking in a store near my home. I've been out with him several times, and I seem to like him more and more each time. I have dates with other boys from this same college but never enjoy myself because I keep thinking of this first one.

And now I don't know what's wrong. He does not come over or take me out as often as formerly. I get so blue these lovely moonlight nights. Could he be tired of me, or do you suppose he has another girl?

SAD AND LONELY.

Perhaps you scared the young man away by letting him see how much you liked him. A young man working his way through college couldn't afford to have a serious love affair. He has to get his degree and must establish himself in business or a profession before he can think of settling down. If a girl wears her heart on her sleeve, and he feels he will have nothing definite to offer for years to come, often he drops out.

It's a good idea to accept invitations from all the boys, and enjoy yourself with them all.

A Splashing Hippo Proves An Artist Can Be Practical

Domenico Mortellito gets down to business on a lineoleum bas-relief.

By ELIZABETH INSKIP WYE
AP Feature Service Writer
New York — Once there was a hippopotamus who lived in the Washington Zoo. The zoo people thought his figure would show off to better advantage if a mural of the banks of the Nile were painted beside his pool. But hippos make quite a splash, and ordinary paints deteriorate with daily showers of water and disinfectant.

So zoo officials called in Domenico Mortellito. He's a young New York artist-craftsman who thrives on problems like finding a paint that will resist hippo-splashing. He found one. He carved a design on cement, colored it with a special rubber paint.

Keeping Step

He points out that science and industry are constantly developing new materials and architects are incorporating them into modern structures. It's up to the artist, he says, to keep up with his times.

His rubber paint for instance, was just an adaptation to artistic purposes of a material builders had been using to make concrete waterproof. Then take lineoleum. Most people think it's a pretty floor covering and walk all over it. Mortellito found that lineoleum is grand stuff to carve. He makes ornamental screens, treasure chests, and lots of things with it.

Always Experimenting

So whenever he hears of some new product of commercial laboratories, like plastics, he's right on the job to experiment. His loft-like studio near the East River is full of experiments—on roofing material, acoustical stuff, copper sheeting and lots of other things you'd never associate with an artist.

Mortellito is dark-eyed and dark-haired, buoyant and enthusiastic. With expansive gestures he showed me around his shop. We walked over great slabs of lineoleum, all carefully carved. Hurt it? Not at all. He led me to a model of a circular room. Through the center ran a column that looked like glass, but wasn't.

A Carpenter, Too

"It's a new material," he told me. "I found I could carve it. Now look," and he turned on a light beneath the column. The room was beautifully decorated, and evenly illuminated. "It's indestructible. You could drop this on the floor. Look—" And he flung it down. The model bounced around unharmed.

There was some furniture in one corner of the room. Yes, he designed it. "I'm a carpenter, too," he added proudly.

He and his wife, Jane Wasey, a sculptress, remodeled a factory to get their studio. They decorated it themselves, too. He built the furniture to suit their own particular needs.

One example of Mortellito's inventiveness is the crib-to-college table. A dressing table for the infant, it can become a sand table, a place to sail boats, a child's eating table, and work bench, and finally an adult's coffee table or portable bar.

Oils and watercolors? Mortellito does both. But it's his belief that each age develops its own mediums. The twentieth century will develop some new ones, too, if this artist has anything to do with it.

Body of Suicide Woman Found in Bohemia River

Elkton, Md., Nov. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Tobin, wife of John H. Tobin, Middletown, Del., undertaker, died today in a jump or fall from a bridge crossing the Bohemia river. A verdict of suicide was returned by Dr. C. C. Dodson, county coroner.

A bridge tender found her body after going onto the span to protest against parking on the bridge. He said he looked over the railing after finding an empty automobile, with a woman's coat and glasses on the seat.

Mrs. Tobin's body was found beside pilings 25 feet beneath the bridge.

Her husband and two children survive.

Frostburg's New High School Will Accomodate 1,200 Pupils

Kopp Tell Council Work On New Building Will Get Under Way Before
January First

Frostburg, Nov. 10.—The mayor and city commissioners, who met last evening in the city council chamber with the Allegany County School Board to see the plans so far prepared for a $400,000 high school to be built on the south side of Eckhart flat, were informed by Charles L. Kopp, spokesman of the delegation, that the new school, part of a long range educational program covering the entire county, would accommodate 1,200 pupils from grades 7 to 12 and was intended for high school pupils from all the towns of the county within a radius of 4 miles from Frostburg.

He explained that the building, to be started before January 1, would occupy a site bordering 700 feet on the National Highway and extending south about 1,000 feet to Piney woods.

The city was asked to cooperate by building street and alley extensions to the school site, and laying sewer and water lines to meet the needs of the proposed structure.

Mayor Horace G. Evans and all members of the council offered their support to the school board in carrying out plans for the new building. The meeting was also attended by Samuel B. Walker, engineer for the Consolidation Coal Company, and G. Kear Hosken, who with B. H. McCrackin and Commissioner Gunnett, is serving on an advisory committee appointed by the school board to help plan for the new school.

Christmas Decorations Planned at Frostburg

It was announced today by the executive committee of the Frostburg Business Men's Bureau that plans were underway for Community Christmas decorations which, if the wholehearted cooperation of the merchants and other residents of the community is secured, will surpass the beautiful street decorations of last year.

With the help of Potomac Edison Company, sufficient street lights were purchased last year to decorate Main street from Water to Bowers. These lights, suspended across the street at each pair of street light posts, were adorned with festoons of Christmas holly, the entire scheme giving Main street the appearance of an illuminated archway of vari-colored lights.

The Business Men's Bureau, with the help of J. Marshall Stewart, local manager of the Potomac Edison Company, secured the decorations last year but collected only enough funds to make a one-third payment, leaving a substantial amount yet to be collected. Even then, the decorations would not have been possible without the generosity of the Potomac Edison Company in supplying free current during the holiday season.

The Business Men's Bureau will shortly start a campaign to secure additional funds to meet the second payment and will also urge all business houses to make early plans for attractive window and store displays for the coming holiday season.

Stanley To Speak

The Frostburg Business Men's Bureau and the Rotary Club will hold a joint meeting with other business and professional men and women of the community, Monday evening, at 8:15 o'clock, in the lecture room of First M. E. Church to hear an address by Henry W. Stanley, manager of the Manufacturers and Wholesalers Bureau, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, who will spend two days here, conducting a merchandising clinic. The dinner, limited to 150 persons, will be served by the Gleaners Sunday School class under direction of Mrs. Thomas Elias.

Mr. Stanley will appear here by courtesy of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce who sponsor merchandising clinics which are designed to be a short course in the principles of better business.

Mr. Stanley was formerly connected with the Dallas, Texas, Chamber of Commerce under whose direction over a period of seven years he supervised 500 merchandising clinics and addressed more than 750 luncheon clubs. He taught during the past summer at Northwestern University and his services have been in demand by scores of important conventions of business men.

St. Johns Church Is Redecorated

New Lights Installed and Other Improvements Are Made

The congregation of St. John's Reformed church recently had the interior of the church redecorated. The panel painted walls, pews, woodwork and floor has been re-varnished and new lights have been installed changing the entire appearance of the church. Mrs. Frances Keller has dedicated a solid mahogany altar railing in memory of her husband the late Dr. Bayard T. Keller, and W. E. Stanton, one of the oldest active members, dedicated a beautiful hand painted picture of "Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane."

Services will be held this Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. A. S. Kresge of Meyersdale, Pa. Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Former Resident is Honored in Missouri

Word has been received here of Dedication services recently held at Webster Groves Presbyterian church, Webster Groves, Mo., at which time a native of Lonaconing, the Rev. David M. Skilling, D.D., was honored for his faithful service, when a new addition was added to the church and dedicated "The David M. Skilling Building for Christian Education."

The Rev. Mr. Skilling has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at Webster Groves for over thirty-five years, entering the charge with a congregation of two hundred members, which now total thirteen hundred members. Rev. Skilling is the brother of the Misses Fannie, Sadie and Margaret Skilling, East Main street, and the late Dr. William Q. Skilling. He is well known here and is now the guest of his sisters, arriving here this evening.

The dedication services continued over a week. At the dedicatory service, the Rev. C. Ransom Comfort, Newark, N. J., preached the service and used as his sermon title, "The Interpreters of Ultimate Values." At this service the following was read:

"This building is honored in the name 'The David M. Skilling Building for Christian Education.' It stands as a fitting tribute of a grateful congregation to our beloved Minister Emeritus, the Reverend David M. Skilling, D.D., who for thirty-five years preached the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ from our pulpit, and lived this triumphant gospel on our streets and in our homes. A Christian gentleman of the highest honor to whom the Webster Groves Presbyterian church will always be indebted."

The building is three stories high and accommodates the Junior, Intermediate and Senior departments. Each floor contains a large assembly room seating two hundred persons with class room having a capacity of from fifteen to twenty pupils. These rooms are arranged on the outer walls opening into the assembly room. The building was erected this past summer and is located on the north side of the church property. It is separated by a light court from the old structure but connected on the ground floor, thus enlarging a former dining room now known as Fellowship Hall. The exterior is early English in character and of simple design. The material is of light brick and harmonizes with the stone work of the adjoining building.

Mrs. D. M. Skilling accompanied the Rev. Mr. Skilling here for his visit.

Research Only Hope for Coal Says Williams

Cheaper Mining of Coal Discussed by Head of Koppers Company

Second Annual Coal Conference is Meeting in Morgantown

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Research can provide the cure-all for ailing King Coal, experts said today.

"Research doesn't necessarily mean chemical research alone," president J. P. Williams, Jr., of the Koppers Coal Company told the second annual coal conference.

"There are physical, mechanical and economic research into the cheaper mining of coal, the preparation of same and then that most important subject of distribution and consumption of the product."

Williams, head of one of the largest operations in the coal business, joined with Secretary Jesse V. Sullivan of the State Coal Association in advocating establishment of a "mineral arts" center at West Virginia University.

"West Virginia virtually owns all the coal deposits, even though the title may be vested in private interests, for those interests cannot move the coal deposits from the state without large capital investments and payroll expenditure, all of which rebound to the benefit of the state," Williams asserted.

A research program at the State University would "pay big dividends in reviving and expanding its largest and most vital industry, and make it a prosperous one," he added. Sullivan described the new Dupont Fabric Nylon, for which coal is one of the basic materials, as an outgrowth of research, adding: "Out of research comes new products, new jobs, new opportunities for employment and a higher standard of living."

Director H. H. Lowry of the Carnegie Tech Coal Research Laboratory pointed out, however, that the responsibility of the development of research findings into an industrial aid rests largely with the coal industry itself. He added:

"Even if research should lead to a complete understanding of the chemical nature of coal and of the physical and chemical changes brought about by the action of heat on it x x x effective use of this scientific data could not be made by industry until there are available more data which will permit accurate descriptions of the physical conditions in the use of coal in present commercial equipment and how those conditions vary with changes in operating practices."

Two New School Buildings for Tucker County

Approval of Bond Issue
Will Give Parsons New High School in Near Future

Parsons, W. Va., Nov. 10.—With the passing of the school bond in this county by a vote of 3,127 to 1,845 against it, this section today began to make plans for their new school buildings. A new high school will be built in this city, and the present high school will be used for graded school pupils as the graded school here was condemned years ago as a fire trap. The $110,000 bond issue, which was approved in this weeks election, will include the building also of a large modern school between Hamblenton and Hendricks, which will cost approximately $25,000.

County superintendent Shirley Cooper said today that no definite location had been decided on for the new high school building here, but that the athletic field was under consideration. He said a special meeting of the board of education would likely be called next week to make some plans for the building program, which will be started soon. Local labor will be used, and taxes will not be increased for anybody.

Parsons Briefs

Bert W. Post, of this city, received a Merit Certificate yesterday from Gov. Homer A. Holt, for having the best subsistence garden in Tucker county during 1938, under the supervision of the County and State Departments of Public Assistance in co-operation with the Agriculture Extension Service of West Virginia University. Judges were here this summer and told Mr. Post that his garden would have a very high rating.

The Hi-Y Club Parsons high school accepted six new members into the organization yesterday. They are Carleton Bennett, Robert Orr, Thomas Shaffer, Everett Fansler, Jennings Scott and Junior Parks. They will be initiated next Monday.

Temperature readings of 18 degrees were recorded here this morning with a heavy frost. Low readings of 15 degrees were reported in nearby mountain sections.

Mr. and Mrs. John McNeely Clarksburg, are visiting here with relatives.

Paul Chambers On Trial For Murder

Young Man Accused of Beating Emma Farley To Death

Williamson, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—A fractured skull caused the death of 18-year-old Emma Farley, a physician testified today at the opening of the trial of young Paul Chambers on a murder charge.

Chambers, 21-year-old son of a Matewan merchant, and the girl, who came to Matewan from McCarr, Ky., to work in a hospital, went riding along Pigeon Creek road the night of July 22.

Hours later she was found dying along the road and Chambers was discovered, apparently unconscious, a few feet away.

Suffered Skull Fracture

A jury qualified for the death penalty heard Dr. O. P. Hodge of Matewan clinic say Miss Farley had suffered a skull fracture and within bounds of the fracture was a sharp incision which penetrated the brain.

There were large abrasions on the girl's body from left shoulder to left ankle, he said. Dr. Hodge added a black substance, evidently particles of tar road surfacing, were ground into the skin and the black particles also were found on the girl's dress and underclothing.

Upon cross-examination by the defense, Dr. Hodge said the fatal injury could have been inflicted if the girl's head came in contact with a sharp rock.

The state contends the girl was beaten to death when she resisted Chambers' advances. The young filling station attendant has said the fatal injuries were suffered in a leap from his car.

Pleads Not Guilty

He replied with a firm "not guilty" when the indictment was read. With the youth in the court room was his father, Thurman Chambers, Matewan business man who day before yesterday was reelected to the Mingo county school board.

Dr. Hodge described Chambers' condition when he was admitted to the Matewan clinic the night of the tragedy.

The youth was nervous, delirious, unaccountable for his actions and had to be restrained by force, the physician said. His clothing was wet and covered with mud and blood, Hodge said.

The physician described three superficial wounds on Chambers' head and asserted they did not appear to be fingernail scratches. The young man had been drinking, the doctor testified.

Missing Woman is Visiting Relatives

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Dorothy May Small, 25, for whom police had searched for five days, notified her family she was staying at the home of relatives, Detective Charles W. Staley said today. He added relatives said Mrs. Staley did not give any reason for her disappearance.

"Man's Country" He-Man Film For Action Fans

Plenty of two-gun action, real he-man fist fights and fast riding makes Monogram's latest western "Man's Country" starring Jack Randall, one of the most thrilling outdoor dramas of the year. This production opened today at the Embassy Theatre to an excited audience.

The key man of the action is fast riding Jack Randall who with the help of a couple of blazing six shooters rides pell mell over a band of ruthless outlaws in an effort to bring law and order to an early western town.

"Man's Country" proves why Monogram leads the field in outdoor dramas. It is a well-made production with all of the requisites of an excellent western. Robert Hill directed at a rapid pace and has injected new action angles that are sure-fire for audience appeal.

The story concerns two brothers, Lex and Buck Ransom. When oil is discovered on Lex's property, Buck makes every effort to obtain control even going to the extent of murdering his own nephew and his friend, Lex is charged with the murders but refuses to be taken by the rangers.

To solve the mystery, the ac ranger of the state, Jack Randall, is requested to clear up the situation. Single-handed, he goes to Lex's hideout and discovers that Lex is innocent and that Buck and his gang are the cause of the killings.

Marjorie Reynolds makes a beautiful heroine while Walter Long, Ralph Peters, Bud Osborne, Harry Harvey, Ernie Adams and Charles King give credible performances. The original screenplay was written by Robert Emmett.

The second hit will be Noah Beery, Jr., Dorothea Kent and William Gargan in "Some Blondes Are Dangerous."

Aviation Film Pays Tribute to Birdmen

The men who wrote the history of aviation in heroic letters across the sky during the past thirty-five years are glorified in Paramount's great cavalcade of the air, "Men With Wings." This technicolor picture, which opens at the Strand today, tells a stirring story of mankind's conquest of the air, as reflected in the lives of three young folks.

Opening at the historic moment in 1903 when the Wright Brothers fly their first plane over the dunes at Kitty Hawk, "Men With Wings" tells the story of three young Americans whose lives are bound up with aviation and who share in its struggles, disappointments and triumphs over three decades.

Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell play the three pioneers of the air who devote their lives to the progress of aviation from the day the girl's father is killed in one of the first airplanes. Caught up in the surge of aviation's forward march, they are carried by it toward a destiny they cannot escape.

On the day they perfected their first plane and begin to manufacture it, the World War breaks out, separating them for the first time in their lives. All the subsequent epoch-making events of aviation are bound up with their own experiences—the flying of the first airmail, the plane-building boom of the Collidge era, Lindbergh's hop from New York to Paris, the 1929 crash and subsequent disillusion, the rebirth of plane-building in the armament race and finally, the round-the-world passenger service of the present.

Miss Campbell gives a heart-warming performance as the young girl who is forced to choose between two types of birdmen, both of whom she loves—the dare-devil, adventure-loving flier, MacMurray, and the courageous, far-visioned builder of planes, Milland. She makes up her mind in a thrilling climax which changes the course of air history.

The three leads, all of whom turn in brilliant performances, are ably assisted by a supporting cast of Hollywood experts. Andy Devine is a comic figure as the mechanic and Lynne Overman, as a wisecracking reporter, is another. Porter Hall, who has so long been typed as a menace, now has the sympathetic role of an air-enthusiastic publisher.

"Prop Wife" Shields Film Star From Fans

Hollywood's latest contribution to the realm of the unusual is the "prop wife"—says handsome Russell Hayden, who returns to the screen with William Boyd and George Hayes in "Bar 20 Justice," which opens today at the Garden Theatre. The "prop wife," as explained by the young horseman, consists of an attractive young lady, any young lady, who poses as his wife at public functions in order to ward off feminine fans.

Because of his excellent work in directing the first of the new 20th Century-Fox Mr. Moto pictures, Norman Foster was chosen by Sol Wurtzel to direct the latest of the series "Mr. Moto Takes A Chance," also opening today at the Garden theatre.

Peter Lorre again plays the stellar role of the Japanese detective, based on the famous Saturday Evening Post character created by J. P. Marquand, with Rochelle Hudson, Robert Kent and J. Edward Bromberg also featured.

The screen play was written by Lou Breslow and John Patrick from

Modern Slang Purposely Used In 1846 Story

The real Johann Strauss, when he lost his position as a bank accountant in 1848 for composing music when he worked, never remarked "I'm fired."

But Fernand Gravet, enacting the composer in "The Great Waltz," currently being shown at the Maryland Theatre, uses that glaring anachronism when he tells Louise Rainer of his discharge.

That modern phrase is one of a number which Julien Duvivier, director of such European successes as "The Golem" and "Pepe le Moko," purposely used in this production, his first in Hollywood.

He does so with good reason, explaining "It is not the age people lived in but how modern they felt at the time that counts when we decide on whether dialogue in period pictures should remain solely in period."

Because Vienna of Strauss' time was the epitome of modernity of that time, Duvivier feels 1938 language is apropos for the picture.

As an instance, Duvivier points to the Strauss speech, "I'm fired." "That slang didn't exist in 1848," says Duvivier, "but something that gave the same effect did. Why let him say, 'I've been dismissed,' which would immediately seem unnatural and un-modern to the audience of today?"

"Similarly, there is a scene where George Houston warns Gravet, about to meet Milza Korjus: 'If you meet her, watch your step.' That is very modern slang. But nothing in English expressed the meaning so well in an ultra-modern manner."

Powell and de Havilland In Comedy 'Hard To Get'

Co-starring a new team of romantic funmakers—Dick Powell and Olivia de Havilland—Warner Bros. comedy will have its local premiere today at the Liberty Theatre. It is called "Hard To Get" and has been described by preview critics as about the tops of the 1938 moviecrop as a laugh-getter.

It may seem odd that the producing studio hasn't teamed up Dick and Olivia before. Each has had a number of successes in the lighter vein, Powell's most recent, for example, "Cowboy From Brooklyn," and Miss de Havilland's preceding picture, "Four's a Crowd." But now that the studio finally has teamed them, it seems to have something to have plenty, indeed.

Although Dick is the leading man, "Hard To Get" isn't a musical picture. In fact, it has only two songs in it: "You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" and "There's a Sunny Side To Every Situation." Powell sings them, of course.

They're by the popular and capable composing team of Harry Warren and Johnnie Mercer. Ray Enright directed "Hard To Get" from a script prepared by Jerry Wald, Maurice Leo and Richard Macauley, based upon an original story by Wally Klein and Joseph Schrank, which was suggested by Stephen Morehouse Avery. Quite a lot of books! But they improve, rather than spoiled, the broth.

LaSalle & Sentinels Play Out-of-Town Today

In Baltimore and Hagerstown for Gridiron Tilts

Big Green Conceded Small Chance With Calvert Hall

KEYSER HIGH HOST TO PIEDMONT TEAM

Play for Mineral County Title at 10 O'clock Today

The Fort Hill High Sentinels and LaSalle Institute's Big Green teams go to Hagerstown and Baltimore, respectively where the Scarlet and White Hilltoppers will take on the Hub City eleven in a Cumberland Valley Athletic League tussle and the Blue and Gold meets the strong Calvert Hall Cardinals. The latter game will start at 3:30 at Walbrook Oval.

Coach Johnny Long of the Sentinels said his entire squad, excepting Walter Orndorff, quarterback, is in top condition. Jack McCrie is back in shape and will start at his old end position.

Neither Hagerstown or Fort Hill has won a C. V. A. L. engagement. LaSalle's record is 1-1, while Hagerstown is 0-2. The Semierites bowing to Allegany 20-0 and Handley 6-2 and the Hillmen to Handley 40-0 and Martinsburg 6-0.

Outside of Van Horn, the balance of the Hagerstown squad is in excellent shape and Fort Hill will go against a well-conditioned eleven. Plans are being made for one of the largest Hub City crowds of the year.

LaSalle's griders, beaten by Altoona, St. Francis, Pitt Central, West Virginia Deaf School and Allegany and tied by St. Mary's, Davis and Fort Hill, will seek their first victory of the season against a heavily-favored Cardinal eleven.

Last week, Calvert Hall lost a tough battle to Gilman 13-6. The Cardinals outplayed their opponents in the first half and threatened several times but a couple of bad breaks resulted in defeat.

Keyser at Piedmont

Coach Homer Fizer's Keyser High outfit will go gunning for its second straight Potomac Valley Conference title at Piedmont with Coach Johnny Casey's combination the opposition. The Golden Tornado has copped four straight conference battles and will be favored to win their final encounter in the circuit. Play starts at 10 a. m. today.

Another Valley Conference tilt will bring together the Petersburg Vikings and Moorefield Yellow Jackets at the latter place with the home team favored.

In other games this afternoon, West Virginia Deaf School will play at Terra Alta, Alumni at Ridgeley, Berkeley Springs at Harper's Ferry, Hedgesville at Romney and Frederickburg at Handley of Winchester.

One scholastic game and one collegiate scrap appear on tomorrow's abbreviated slate, with Coach Herman Hall's Allegany warriors squaring off with the Martinsburg Bulldogs at Fort Hill Stadium here in a C. V. A. L. tilt which will determine the league leadership.

Perfect CVAL Records

Both the Martinsburg and Allegany teams are unbeaten, untied and unscored on in C. V. A. L. competition but on the basis of comparative scores, the classy Campers will be slight favorites.

Coach Coburne is hopeful of putting a full-strength squad on the field. Last week, "Rocky" Banks failed to see service partly because of an injured foot.

The Bulldogs are prepared to concentrate on Jim Gaffney, Allegany's chief threat in past games. However, the West Virginians are all taking Paul Kemp and Joe Wilkinson, a pair of speedy Allegany half-backs, seriously.

In Saturday's college engagement, Coach Dana Lough's Potomac State School Catamounts of Keyser, 12-0 victors over the Shepherd College Rams last week, will meet Concord College on the latter's gridiron.

Turkey Day Tickets On Sale Next Week

Reserved seat tickets for the Allegany High-Fort Hill High Thanksgiving Day game at the Fort Hill stadium will be placed on sale next week, school officials said yesterday, following a conference between representatives yesterday.

The game will start at 2:30 p. m. and out-of-town officials will be secured.

Both sides of the field will be used, Fort Hill students and followers using the new wooden bleacher section and Allegany the concrete stands. The stadium, including the new bleachers will seat about 4,400, which was the attendance last year.

Dates for the 1939 contests between Allegany and LaSalle Highs and Fort Hill and LaSalle were also announced. Allegany and LaSalle will meet the last Friday in October, October 27, instead of the first Friday in November. LaSalle and Fort Hill will meet on Armistice Day in 1939 instead of mid-October as previously.

The SPORT TRAIL

By PAUL MICKELSON

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—The old professor's soap box, dedicated to the voice of the people, got soaked with stinging oratory this week. Pittsburgh's defeat by Carnegie Tech opened the speech-making flood gates.

"Just thought I'd wait until Pitt got it in the neck before sounding off" is the way many letters began. Some were kind to the experts, some very critical, and a few were downright mean. It seems to the professor that several hundred thousand fans were deliciously happy because the mighty Panther got caged, proving a football reputation is a very dangerous possession. Chances are Pitt has 10 times as many admirers today as a week ago because it proved a human team that could be licked.

Excerpts of the soap box speeches, excluding the ePitt blasts:
John Roach, Johnson City, Tenn.: "We 'uns down south still think Tennessee could give any team in the nation plenty of hell, because they've never opened up on anyone so far. Probably everyone will forget she knocked off Alabama, L. S. U. and Auburn."

A. P. San Diego, Cal.: "Nobody can say which is the best football team but Santa Clara has the best record. In the last three years, since Buck Shaw has been coach, Santa Clara has lost but one game—in 1936. They've won all the rest (no ties) including two Sugar bowl games. Because of a silly rule, only coast conference teams represent the west in the Rose bowl."

Jake Wade, Charlotte, N. C.: News-Observer: "I hope to high heavens I am not mixed up in any organized, concentrated all-America pressure ballyhoo this season. But it's reasonable to believe that Duke, 7th ranking team in the nation, has some lads worthy of mention. I'll nominate a real one—Dan Hill, Duke's raging, bounding, hell-for-leather center. He's consistently tops."

E. V. Mitchell, the Herald, Durham, N. C.: "Hill's good enough for any all-America."
Martin J. Moraghan, Jr., and John P. Sheehan, Jr., Holy Cross '39: "Only by beating Cornell at Dartmouth take a first definite step towards the deserved national ranking. Until last Saturday, we considered Holy Cross the best team in the east. Now we know it is the equal of the best in the country."

Tom O'Hern, Davenport, Iowa, Times: "How about St. Ambrose of Davenport? With Santa Clara, it's the only one of last year's undefeated, untied teams still undefeated. The record now is 30 games without defeat."

Cumberland Heights Grocers Play Sunday

The Cumberland Heights Grocers football team will journey to Frostburg Sunday to battle the Frostburg Spartans at 2:30. Coach "Boots" Sapp of the Grocers has held drills several days this week and is confident of victory.

Coach Sapp, unlike some sandlot mentors, doesn't rely on brute strength to smash the opponent with power plays, but has his cohorts drilled to execute tricky reverses and spinners, intermixed with passes.

The Spartans will undoubtedly prove tough since they have shown plenty of ability in downing the Clingdents of Mt. Savage, who annually place topnotch teams on the field.

The locals will line up with S. Dunlap, lb; McCoy It; Mitchell, lb; Dean, c; Moran, rg; Burns, rt; Bartman, re; G. Dunlap, qb; Spoltore, lb; Hartsock, rb; Bratt, fb.

Reno Claims Girl, 14, Golf's Youngest Champ

Miss Thelma Carlton, chubby fourteen-year-old Reno, Nev., school girl and granddaughter of one of the founders of the Woolworth five-and-ten-cent stores, won the championship of the Reno Women's Golf Club against another heiress, Mrs. Minerva Rasbok.

Miss Carlton is believed to be the youngest feminine golf club champion in the United States. She has been playing for four years.

Sam Snead Wins White Sulphur Open

Fires Spectacular 32 For Seven Under Par Total 273

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Firing a spectacular 32 on the final nine holes, Sam Snead came through late today with a seven-under-par 273 for the 72-hole White Sulphur Open Golf tournament to win the first prize in the $3,000 event by two strokes over Ky Lafoon of Chicago.

It was a courageous, heartwarming comeback that added $700 to Snead's tournament earnings for a $18,272 total this year, after he had slipped to over par on the first nine of the final round. He would up with a 68, two under par and one lower than his morning round.

Laffoon, with steady, errorless golf that kept him under par on every round, led Snead by a stroke as the final nine began. But the hard working westerner couldn't match the slamming home pro's pace thereafter.

Tied for third were Johnny Bulla, chunky young Chicagoan Billy Burke of Belleair, Fla., and Sammy Byrd, the former New York Yankee outfielder of Philadelphia, with 275.

Snead came up to the eighteenth hole this morning with the situation well in hand and shooting for a 66 that would have put him four strokes ahead of Laffoon and Bulla, who shot sensational golf during the morning round to come within striking distance.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—Scores in the White Sulphur golf tournament:

Don Hutson Ties Own Record With Nine Touchdowns

Green Bay Packers End Near Three Other Marks

Teammate Hinkle Jumps To Second in Pro Loop Scoring

Don Hutson, Green Bay Packers end from Alabama, tied his own National Football League record of nine touchdowns in one season and is within striking distance of three other new league marks, according to individual statistics for the ninth week of play announced today. By catching 12 passes for 120 yards and four touchdowns in his two remaining games against Detroit and New York, Hutson can set new standards for passes caught, scoring, and yards gained on passes in addition to touchdowns in one season.

Far From Impossible
These marks are far from impossible. Hutson has twice scored three touchdowns, twice caught six passes, and four times gained over 60 yards in single games this season. Hutson leads the National League in scoring with nine touchdowns and two conversions for 56 points and by continuing his present pace will be the first lineman in league annals to lead in this department.

Gaynell Tinsley, Chicago Cardinals, to lead 31 in 29 in this department and the race between these rivals in an effort to set a new record for catches in their next two contests will be an interesting one.

Four changes in positions for individual laurels were recorded in the past week. Clarke Hinkle, Green Bay fullback, jumped from a tie for third in scoring to second, behind his teammate Hutson, with 45 points. Scrapper Farrell, Brooklyn recruit, rose from fourth to second in ground gaining with 323 yards; just thirty less than Bill Shepherd, Detroit who continues to lead with 353 yards.

Baugh Is Second
Jack Robbins, Cardinals freshman, again passed Sammy Baugh, Washington, for second in forward passing. Ralph Kercheval, Brooklyn, tied Regis Monahan, Detroit and Ward Cuff, New York, with four field goals, his 45 yard kick Sunday being the longest of the season.

Ed Danowski, New York, boosted his efficiency to 60 per cent as he continued to pace the forward passers with 56 completions out of 93 tosses for 684 yards. Joe Carter, Philadelphia, is third in pass receiving with 22 catches and fourth in scoring with 36 points. Andy Parks, Washington, is third in scoring with 37 points. Not more than 3 yards separate third, fourth, and fifth place in ground gaining: Cecil Isbell, Green Bay; Parks; and Whizzer White, Pittsburgh, have 304, 303 and 301 yards, respectively.

From South Bend we move to Evanston and Northwestern where capacity is around 37,000. This leaves us (I'm cutting myself in) at 385,000.

From Evanston Notre Dame moves along to the immense stadium at Los Angeles, where I have seen a collection of 105,000 file in. Southern California drew 95,000 against California. Unless something of a definitely morbid nature happens to Notre Dame and Southern California in the November interim I believe this game on December 3 will draw at least 95,000, lifting the Notre Dame total to 480,000 through the nine games.

The amazing thing is that pro football has come along with such a rush—without taking anything away from college crowds which this season must be cracking all past records.

Southern California may reach 400,000 and if you add the Rose Bowl there will be 88,000 more. U. C. L. A. and Notre Dame, U. S. C.'s last two opponents, won't draw many less than 180,000 between them.

I wonder if the fallen knew, that from their golden dust, Their khaki, matted with the clay, Their rifles red with rust, They'd reap an even richer crop of shining steel and shell, Of killing gas and bayonets that flames the way to hell?

I've seen them sit and wait for dawn—that meant the end of life. The final dream of mates and home—the final day of strife.

And I wonder if they wondered, as they swept across the top, Their dust would plant the harvest for an even richer crop?

I've seen them drawn and haggard as they gave their youth away. For some dim phantom of a dream that had no thought of pay.

A spectre known as Duty, underneath Old Glory's spread, In a world where dreams have vanished—and the dreamers are the dead,

They broke the stout Cantigny line, where Germans reeled and ran. They drove them back at Soissons, and they stopped them at Sedan. They paid the price in Argonne's depths—I wonder if they knew The crop their golden dust has raised to build a greater foe?

AN ATTENDANCE BATTLE
New York, Nov. 10—My practically silent but fine-feathered friend by the name of George Preston Marshall, owner of the professional Washington Redskins, tells me his team will break all records for football attendance this fall.

Mandarin Marshall admits that he has the advantage in eleven games against nine. He figures his attendance mark for those eleven pro games will be around 470,000 souls. If Mr. Marshall doesn't mind I'd like to do a little checking on these figures and subpoena Notre Dame.

Notre Dame played to 35,000 against Kansas—35,000 against Georgia Tech, with many turned away—40,000 against Illinois—40,000 against Carnegie Tech—80,000 against Army and 63,000 against Navy. This seems to total 293,000.

Now we'll move to South Bend and Minnesota this week. The Notre Dame capacity is 55,000 and that's what it will be. This brings the count to 348,000.

From South Bend we move to Evanston and Northwestern where

Davis Cup Star To Get $75,000 To Play Vines

Redhead Already Has $25,000 To Bind Pro Tennis Tour

AMATEUR SOLONS KISS CUP GOODBYE

See Chances of U. S. In World Competition Go Aglimmer

BY GAYLE TALBOT
New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—To the utter astonishment of nobody, Donald Budge turned tennis professional today for a tidy $75,000 and will open a long series of one-night stands against Ellsworth Vines January 3 at Madison Square Garden.

Walter Pate, captain of the American Davis Cup team, announced Budge already had $25,000 in his pants pocket, representing the initial payment. Promoter Jack Harris agreed to pay the 23-year old redhead 25,000 additional slugs March 1, and the final 25,000 at the close of the tour.

Touching Scene

There was a touching scene as the United States Lawn Tennis Association kissed Budge and the Davis Cup goodbye. President Holcombe Ward joined Pate in wishing Budge every happiness.

Budge might have choked up completely if he hadn't had one hand on the $25,000 check. He said he hated to turn professional, that he would have liked to play amateur tennis the rest of his life, but that parental obligations forced his decision. His father has been seriously ill in Oakland, Calif., and Budge will return there within a few days.

Budge and Vines will play approximately 50 matches this winter. Harris said, touching most important cities.

Ward and Pate said the move would not affect Budge's ranking as the national No. 1 amateur for 1938.

He was asked how he thought he would make out against Vines, who has been slugging the ball around professionally for five years and is fixed for life financially.

"I guess it will be close," he mused.

Detroit Tigers Boast Five Homer Champions

Detroit has produced the home run champion or co-champion five times, writes Sam Greene, in "The Detroit News." The first was Sam Crawford, who led in 1908 with what now seems the extremely modest total of seven home runs. Crawford, of course, was batting against the so-called dead ball and so was Ty Cobb when he topped the field in 1909 with nine homers.

In 1914 Crawford and J. Franklin Baker, of Philadelphia, shared the title with eight. Greenberg shared it with Fox in 1935, when each hit for the circuit thirty-six times.

In 1937 Greenberg had forty homers, his best previous output, but yielded supremacy to Joe Mauer, who finished with forty-six. He attained the forty mark on August 19 and steadily increased production until he reached fifty-eight on September 27. From that point he was stopped by six different pitchers—Howard Mills, Emil Bidill and Buck Newson, of the Browns, and Dennis Gahnehouse, Bob Feller and Clay Smith, of the Indians.

East Side Ramblers Host to Cinder Tips

The East Side Ramblers football team will be host to the Mt. Savage Cinder Tips at Golden Field here Sunday afternoon with play getting under way at 3 o'clock. This will be the third engagement for the Ramblers who reorganized after a lay-off of four years, and Johnnie Golden, pilot of the pigskin pack, hopes for a change in fortune. The Ramblers lost to the Tips in their first game, 7-0, and bowed to the Cumberland Heights eleven last Sunday 13-0. The lineups will be:

Night Baseball Proves Boon to 3-Eye League

With the curtain rung down on the regular I. I. I. baseball season in Decatur, the paid admissions by 50,000 customers during the season indicate that Decatur likes baseball. The night game has spelled the difference between success and failure in minor leagues. Several major league clubs may be playing at least a score of games under lights next year. In the olden days a weekday afternoon attendance of 300 in Decatur was average. The night game has made it possible for the average attendance to be greatly increased.

Parsons High Wins Over Belington Hi Closes Season With 20-6 Triumph. Cox Scores All Three

Parsons high school football team swept to a 20-6 victory over Belington high on the Parsons gridiron yesterday to close its 1938 season with a record of six wins and three defeats.

Parsons got rolling within two minutes of the kick-off when Belington fumbled and Cox soon plunged over from the two yard line with the first of the three touchdowns, all of which he personally carried across the pay-off stripe. A Barr converted with a placement. Barr duplicated after Cox had galloped 40-yards for his second score within the quarter.

The two teams resorted to a punting and passing duel during the second and third quarters with neither making much headway. In the fourth Cox broke loose on a line plunge and went 30 yards for Parsons' third score with Barr failing this time to convert a placement. With two minutes to go S. Koontz skirted the Parsons' end from the eight yard line for Belington's only score. Myers failed to convert the point.

Belington had eight first downs to Parsons' seven. The game which was witnessed by more than 500 fans, was a long-drawn out affair, continuing from 3:15 to 5:30 with the first quarter lasting 45 minutes.

Fox is First

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—America's first entry for the 1940 Olympic was placed on file by the American Olympic Committee today. It came from Donna Fox, of New York City, captain of the last American Olympic bobsled team and holder of the course record at Lake Placid, where the United States tryouts will be held February 10-13, 1939.

CORNELL AND DARTMOUTH
Here we have a battle between two rested teams, who also have squad strength. Dartmouth had a walkover last Saturday and Cornell had a complete rest. The same is true of Tennessee and Duke, the two stronger Southern teams, facing Vanderbilt and Syracuse. But there has been no resting spot for Yale and Princeton who must shoot it out with the best they have left.

Revival Weekend On Tap for W. Va. Hi-School Teams

Oldest Rivalry in State Heads List of Scholastic Games

By JOHN SEHON
Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—It's "revival weekend" on the state schoolboy gridiron, with the oldest rivalry in the state—Huntington against Charleston—heading the list of feature attractions.

Only one of the time-honored games has any bearing on the state championship race, with Wheeling's sometimes surprising Gold and Blues standing in the way of Parkersburg's Red powerhouse.

The two teams meet in an Armistice Day match at Wheeling with one of the most impressive records in the state behind it—they took East Fairmont 73-0 last week—the Big Reds are an odds-on choice to continue their victory march.

But Wheeling, beaten by Charleston which in turn was shellacked by Parkersburg, may rise to the heights in a "do-or-die" attempt.

Charleston Is Favored

Huntington's disappointing Pony Express hasn't allowed Charleston to score on it in two years—and they never have dropped a game in Fairfield Stadium to the Mountain Lions, which makes two good reasons why the Bricks-coached aggregation may find its vaunted power against a Charleston team which accomplished the impossible in its last two times out.

The Mountain Lions are "hot." They smell horse-meat for Saturday dinner and even the most pessimistic fan in the Capital feels that this is a Charleston year.

Fairmont east and west, city rivals who play a "no holds barred" engagement each fall will furnish the Monongahela valley feature tomorrow. Trounced by Parkersburg, East Fairmont goes into the match with the underdog status.

Beckley's High-Flying Eagles, displaying an all-state caliber back in Buster Smith, may find their match in a Washington Irving team which is decidedly on the comeback at Clarksburg tomorrow.

East Bank Tracks Hint

Unbeaten, but tied, East Bank travels up New River gorge to Hinton tomorrow to see what it can do with a team which also boasts the same unsullied record.

The Buckhannon-Grafton run-in at Grafton, if it lives up to past history, should provide fireworks enough for any peace celebration tomorrow; while Logan's Wildcats should draw the whole county to the little mining community of Man, a few miles up the Chesapeake and Ohio branch line.

Other Armistice Day games: Alderson at Lewisburg; Fort Gay at Barboursville; Buffalo at Ceredo-Kenova; St. Albans at Clendenin; Dunbar at Mount Hope; Normantown at Elizabeth; Gauley Bridge at Gassaway; Tyler at Grantsville; Hamlin at Milton; Poca at Huntington; Sharpless at Madison; Oak Hill at Montgomery; Ravenswood at Point Pleasant; Rupert at Renick; St. Marys at Sistersville; Roosevelt-Wilson (Clarksburg) at Shinnston; Richwood at Summersville; Trap Hill at Shady Springs; Northfork at War; Tiltonsville, O., at Wellsburg; Williams-town at Ripley; Elkview at Seth.

"7 Sacks of Cement" Form Illinois Line

Champaign, Ill., (AP)—Any day now the publicity lads will be tagging the Illinois line the "seven sacks of cement" or something similar. So far, the Illini front wall has been about as easy to get through as a granite block.

DePaul wound up with a net loss of 20 yards in their game and Indiana, somewhat more successful, managed to finish with a loss of only nine.

Pitchers Failed Traynor

Rookie Johnny Rizzo of the Pirates, came through with a bang during the last season and almost won a pennant single handed, but Pie Traynor, who had more pitchers than any other club, would have given his last dollar for one that could win "going away" in those last few exciting days. The team had the spirit and the hitting, but the jinx that's stuck to Traynor went to work on his pitching staff, took away their stuff and made their fast balls easy pickings.

End-of-the-world department: Syracuse over Duke.

Distribution department (Hibernian division): O'Toole and McLareys, McGurks and O'Haras—The bells are 't, Mary's, The game, Santa Clara's.

Red revolutionary note: Cornell over Dartmouth.

Weather forecast: Carnegie Tech will lick Duquesne. Provided that it doesn't Resne.

Department of utter fearlessness (cripple kicking division): Harvard over Virginia. Texas Christian over Texas. Army over Chattanooga. Boston College over Boston University.

Come-home-all-is-forgiven department: California over Oregon.

Bears-are-in-season note: Holy Cross over Brown.

Sad fate overtakes venerable wizard: Send Villanova to a neutral corner While the ref. counts ten over Glenn S. Warner.

Lightning-never-strikes-twice department: Pittsburgh over Nebraska.

Texas topics: Baylor's teams on the whole a Touchdown better than Loyola.

Arkansas is overdue To flay the hide of S. M. U.

And Rice will shear the Aggies' fleece. Without the aid of state police.

Zoological note: Tigers have always been weak on forward pass defense. This was demonstrated clearly by Col. Montgomery Terwilliger, in Bengal, in the spring of '38, when he completed six passes against a splendid jungle specimen of the man-eating variety. They were using the colonel's dice. Yale over Princeton.

Interneecine department: The red and blue will wave again On high (well, call it fairly high) When Penn State drops the game to Penn By the width of a caterpillar's eye.

Who'll-break-the-bad-news-to-Zuppke department: Ohio State over Illinois.

Stagg Thinks Grid Game Improving

Grand Old Man of Football Grew Up With Sport

Chicago, Nov. 10. (AP)—Football's "grand old man," Amos Alonzo Stagg, still gets as big a kick out of football as he did when he began coaching almost a half century ago—and thinks football is getting better every year.

The 76-year-old gridiron mentor, as ruddy-faced and full of enthusiasm as any youngster just starting a career, led his College of the Pacific football squad into town preparatory to Saturday's battle with the Chicago Maroons, whom he coached for 41 years.

"It's just fine to be back," said the man who "went west" six years ago after retirement regulations forced him to step out as Chicago coach at the age of 70. "You know, they always used to say 'Stagg fears Purdue.' Well, I can't say we fear Chicago. But as I've never worried too much about the outcome of the game, we'll just try to win this one in stride."

Stagg won't agree with the old timers who believe football in the old days was better than it is now. "I've seen football from its infancy," he said, "and there isn't any doubt that teams generally are better now. Coaching is better, more high school teams are playing better ball and both attack and defense are better than they used to be."

Stagg's team has won three and lost as many games this season, capturing its last two contests impressively from Nevada and Fresno State. The Maroons have lost four, tied one and won once this year.

Seven fatalities were reported from high schools, four from sandlots and two from athletic clubs. Of the indirect fatalities, there were two each from the colleges and high schools and one from athletic clubs. Pneumonia, septicemia, dilated heart and asphyxiation accounted for these deaths.

The seven high school deaths directly due to football were a drop of four from the same period in 1937; the four sandlot deaths were one more than last year; there were two athletic club fatalities last year, as this season, while there were no college deaths for this period in 1937.

Armed thugs stalks Cleveland terrorizing small business man: Western Reserve over John Carroll.

Watch Oklahoma win her seventh start. (Missouri is the party of the second part).

Grid Fatalities Show Decrease Fourteen Deaths Reported Due Directly To Game To Date

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 10 (AP)—Football fatalities in high school, college, sandlot and athletic club games show a decrease for the second straight year, according to a preliminary report issued today by Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue University, who makes an annual survey of gridiron vital statistics for the American Football Coaches Association and the N. C. A. A.

Fourteen deaths directly attributable to football and five indirectly due to football have been recorded through Nov. 7. Last year, for the same period, there were 16 deaths for which football was directly responsible.

Of the fourteen fatalities, only one was reported from the colleges, that of Martin B. Morrow, 21-year-old player for Morgan Park Junior College in Chicago. Morrow died Nov. 5 of a cerebral hemorrhage, which, with skull fractures and internal injuries, was found by Dr. Eastwood to be one of the chief causes of death.

Seven fatalities were reported from high schools, four from sandlots and two from athletic clubs. Of the indirect fatalities, there were two each from the colleges and high schools and one from athletic clubs. Pneumonia, septicemia, dilated heart and asphyxiation accounted for these deaths.

The seven high school deaths directly due to football were a drop of four from the same period in 1937; the four sandlot deaths were one more than last year; there were two athletic club fatalities last year, as this season, while there were no college deaths for this period in 1937.

Horsemen Gather For Bowie Meeting

Every Stall Allotted For 15-Day Meeting Opening On November 16

Bowie, Md., Nov. 10—The thousands of horsemen now gathered in this state for the closing session of the 1938 eastern season, which starts November 16, are shipping their stables in for the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's 15-day meeting.

Race Secretary John B. Campbell said last night that much as he is pulling for good weather throughout the meeting, he still won't let inclement weather annoy him as he has 3,000 thoroughbreds of every age with which to call upon to make up his daily cards.

Every stall was allotted weeks ago. Thousands of horses are quartered at Laurel, Marlboro, Timonium, Pimlico and Havre de Grace, whose owners are planning to van here on the days they are lucky enough to get a chance to run.

The cream of America's riding colony will don silks here and the boys can all be counted upon to flash their best form as they are anxious to make a good showing with the time to sign 1939 contracts just around the corner.

Track Superintendent Dick Pending, according to horsemen who have been working their charges over his track, has made it almost a second faster since last spring.

If such is the case, then turfites can look for a track record or two to go by the boards as the best colony of thoroughbreds ever to race here is on hand.

Cumberland Marches In Name Of Peace Twenty Years After

First Armistice Rocked the City With Wild Joy

Whistles and Bells Woke Citizens at 4 a. m. For Big Parade

Let's We Forget!
At 3:30 a. m., Nov. 11, 1918, the good people of Cumberland were sound asleep, unaware that history was about to be made.

A few minutes later, a sleepy telegraph operator somewhere down the line jerked to attention. Out of the thin, metallic ticking of his instrument there grew the noise of Cumberland's hallelujahs, wild-est celebration.

The war was over! Twenty years ago today!

Extra Out Early
Whistles began to blow. Church bells rang. The bloody fields of Flanders had grown quiet, but volley after volley of joyous shots rang out in the valleys of the Alleghenies.

Newspaper presses were thundering as people tumbled out of their warm beds. "Peace!" screamed the headlines in specially manufactured red type, the largest type Cumberland people have ever seen.

"The Fighting Has Ceased!" "Now Celebrate To Your Heart's Content!" "IT IS TRUE!!!" Those were the headlines.

Wept for Joy
One page was all they put out. But that was enough.

It sold 25,000 copies. People took one look at it. That was enough. Men, women and children wept for joy. It was true! It was true! The boys were coming home, most of them!

What sweetheart, what mother, what draft dodger wasn't happy that day. "Cumberland Intoxicated With Joy," was the headline on the next edition to come out.

Saloons Closed
Cumberland soon became intoxicated with something more than joy, so much so that the Grand Jury, which was in session at the time, had already ordered by 9 a. m. that all saloons (they called them saloons in those days) close at once and stay closed until the next day.

The lid was off.
In Lonaconing the miners threw their dinner pails in the air, hurried to the mine, and brought out all the mules and horses to parade up and down the main street, too. That little mining camp was really mad with joy. It had nearly 1,000 boys at the front.

Man Shot Celebrating
"Pattie" Hunt, an iron worker employed on the construction of the new B. and O. shops, had already been accidentally shot through the head as he stood in front of the Windsor Hotel watching the impromptu parade.

But read about it the way they wrote it the day it happened. "Long before daylight the downtown streets began to fill and before 8 a. m. the crowd resembled that to be seen on the afternoon on a big holiday," said the Evening Times.

"Everybody was carrying the Stars and Stripes."
"Every kind of noise maker was brought into action."

Fire Started
"Automobiles came rumbling through the city with wash boilers and tin pans tied to the rear, creating a racket that was deafening."

"Newsboys announcing the glad tidings carried with them horns and tin cans filled with stones to announce their coming."
"In the midst of the early morning gathering one of the large shell-shaped booths that had been used for the sale of Thrift Stamps was carried to the head of Baltimore street and set on fire."

Parade Starts
"While fermen poured water on the flaming structure Charles A. Schundt, local tailor, made a speech that put the crowd in a cheering mood, and the orator was carried from the scene as a hero is carried from the field after a striking victory has been scored."

"The incident was brought to a close when Charlie was pinched and hustled to the police station. Here he was sentenced to wear a police uniform and patrol the streets all day."

No sooner had this scene been concluded than the machinists and shopmen from the B. and O. shops popped around the corner of South Mechanic street carrying with them the mammoth American flag.

Business Disrupted
"An escort to the Stars and Stripes that was carried to victory against the shot and shell turned loose by the Huns on the Western Front was made up of men armed with drums and band instruments."

"Lids of garbage cans were used as cymbals."

"After them came the Western Maryland men, girls from the 16 laundries, Potter's Dye Works, Silk Mill, and other industries, and all

Public Buildings, Banks Closed All Day Today

All public buildings and banks will be closed here today in observance of Armistice Day.

Included will be the county court house, city hall, the post office and the library.

There will be no deliveries of mail by either city or rural carriers, according to Postmaster James C. Shriver, and no window service will be available.

Letter and paper mail will be dispatched and placed in post office lock boxes as usual, the postmaster added.

Wedding License Business Booms

The marriage license business at the clerk of the court's office yesterday was unusually good for a Thursday.

A total of 21 licenses was issued. Whether this was due to news of the passage of the 48-hour marriage law or to the fact that today is a holiday was an unanswered question.

Although it is true that the clerk's office generally has a good day on marriage licenses just prior to a holiday, it is just as true that two of yesterday's applicants indicated that their presence was due to news of the new law's ratification in Tuesday's referendum.

They told courthouse attaches that the impression was general in the Pittsburgh area, whence they hailed, that the law was slated to go into effect the first of next week.

The law, requiring a 48-hour wait between application for a license and its issuance, will not be effective before Dec. 2, according to a ruling by the attorney-general's office.

LaVale Fire House Fund Reaches $800; Campaign Will Be Continued

With $800 already collected in its drive toward $4,500 for a new fire station for LaVale, a citizens' committee last night expressed itself as well-pleased with the response to date and announced plans for continuance of the campaign for another week.

Progress to date was reported at a meeting of all canvassers last night.

Approximately one-third of the population of the LaVale area has been contacted, according to James W. Beacham, chairman of the finance committee.

"The response thus far has been highly gratifying," Beacham said.

High Schools Plan Armistice Celebration

Armistice Day celebrations are planned for today in both of Cumberland's public high schools.

LaSalle Institute, parochial high school, will observe a holiday today. Dramatizations will feature the observances at both Fort Hill and Allegheny.

At Allegheny, the program will be heard by classes in their home-rooms by means of the public address system, according to Ralph R. Webster, principal.

The program, consisting of music and an Armistice Day playlet, will be broadcast from the auditorium beginning at 11 a. m. A moment of silent meditation will be observed at the beginning of the program.

The playlet has been composed and directed by Lewyn C. Davis, assistant principal.

Two separate programs in celebration of the day will be held at Fort Hill, according to Victor D. Helsey, principal.

At 10 a. m. the high school group will assemble in the auditorium for an Armistice Day dramatization to be presented by the Junior Players.

Entitled "Socks," it is a story as dramatized by the group, under the direction of Miss Helen Smith.

At 1 p. m. the seventh and eighth grades will gather for a similar program, including an original drama by the Little Players, under the direction of Miss Alverda L. Ford.

In addition, the entire student body will stand at attention and salute the flag at 11 a. m. as the school band plays "The Star Spangled Banner."

pupils from the schools, which had been suspended.

"Business in the city was at a complete standstill all day. The stores closed as soon as the sales forces arrived. Some of the employees were loaded into auto trucks, while others joined the parade on foot."

Prophetic Words
"It was an inspiring sight."
"November 11, 1918, will never be forgotten."

Prophetic words, those November 11 has not been forgotten. And it will not be forgotten—unless there comes another war whose horror will blot out all memory of the 16-month conflict America fought to end all war.

Parade Starts At 4 P. M. With 2,000 in Line

Public Dance In Armory Will Climax Day of War's End

Cumberland was ready to march with the rest of the nation today—not in preparation for war, but in celebration of America's peace.

Nearly 2,000 persons are expected to parade through the downtown section this afternoon to mark the twentieth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

Sponsored and headed by the Cumberland veterans who took up arms more than two decades ago in an attempt to "make the world safe for democracy," the Queen City's eight-division parade will get underway at 4 p. m.

Parade Forms at 3 p. m.
Forming at 3 p. m. on Commerce street at Williams street, it will circle the business district before marching down Baltimore street between crowd-lined sidewalks.

Grand marshal of the parade will be Thomas F. Conlon, service officer of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, sponsor of the event.

Its route will be from Williams street to Centre street, to Market street, to Mechanic street, to Baltimore street, to George street, to Salem street, to State army and disband.

Many Groups To March
Leading the march will be the American Legion light artillery, followed by motorcycle police, a platoon of police and Grand Marshall Conlon.

The rest of the parade will follow in this order:
First Division: American Legion band; Mayor Thomas W. Koon and City Councilmen; departments of city government.

Second Division: Percy H. Ingles, marshal; Frank Diamond, aide; First Maryland Drum and Bugle corps; Tyler Post, Grand Army of the Republic; Henry Hartsock post, Spanish War Veterans.

Third Division: F. A. Puderbaugh, marshal; D. F. McMullen, aide; Eagles' band; Girl Scouts; Daughters of American Revolution.

Fourth Division: J. R. Kelly, marshal; Charles O'Donnell, aide; Hollidaysburg Drum and Bugle corps; Knights of Malta; Tri-Towns Fire company; Potomac Fire company.

Fifth Division: Heyl D. Walker, marshal; American Legion Band of Bedford, Pa.; Salvation Army; Barton Hose company; Midland Fire company.

Sixth Division: Harry Vogel, marshal; A. Poggell, aide; Allegheny high school band; Western Maryland Schoolboy patrolmen.

Seventh Division: H. D. Bogler, marshal; R. C. Paupé, aide; Fort Hill high school band; Prosbury Fire company; LaVale Fire company.

Business Men Give Prizes
Eighth Division: R. C. Bowers, marshal; Roy Whitson, aide; Sons of Legionnaires drum and bugle corps; Sons of Legionnaires; Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion; Fort Cumberland Post Unit Auxiliary; vehicles and floats.

Through the co-operation of Cumberland business men, prizes totaling $300 are offered for the outstanding drum and bugle corps, bands, fire companies and organizations.

First prizes of $50 and second prizes of $25 are offered in each of these classifications.

Judges for the awards, who will be in the reviewing stand at the Fort Cumberland hotel, will be Col. George Henderson, Major Harry Flook, A. G. Fowler, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka, and William Cramer.

Motion pictures will be taken of the parade, it has been announced. After being shown at local theatres, the film will be preserved among the Legion records here.

A buffet lunch will be served at the Legion home on Harrison street immediately after the parade.

The celebration will be climaxed with a public dance at the State armory at 9 p. m.

The committee in charge of the observance consists of Frank Diamond, Morton Peskin, Paul Hutson, Percy Ingles, Jesse Hoppert, Gordon Leatherman, Claude Deal, Thomas Mullaney, Roy Lottig, H. R. McNaughton, Robert Bowers, L. F. Flynn, C. A. Eyre and Mr. Conlon.

Permits Are Issued For Two New Dwellings
Permits for two new Cumberland homes were issued yesterday by the city engineer's office.

One was to Henry A. Davis, 415 Holland street for a two-story brick and frame house on Memorial avenue, estimated cost $4,415.

The second was to Joseph P. Reising, 418 Holland street, for two-story brick house on Shawnee avenue to cost $3,800.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Flash! The Republicans have moved out of their North Centre street campaign headquarters, and their place has been taken by, of all things, Christmas toys. It's the holiday overflow from Hill's.

The Republicans may need some toys, but we suppose the Democrats will soon have plenty of jobs to play around with.

Why do we celebrate Armistice Day? Why the flags, and martial music, and the marching?

It's hardly a victory celebration, for there was no victory. The World knows that now.

It's hardly in memory of the fallen heroes. May 30 is devoted to the consecration of their sacrifices.

It's hardly to honor the crippled and the maimed, for they won't be marching.

And it's hardly an expression of gratitude that the war did end after four long years, for people quickly forget gratitude and younger America never knew it.

Why then, Armistice Day? We don't know. But if it does serve to help make America stop to think a second time, and hundredth time, before this nation plunges into a foreign conflict, then it is dedicated to a noble purpose.

It's one of the mysteries of life, we think, how a cynical, wild-living reporter, usually an Irishman, can so often sit down and write for his paper a sentimental little story so full of love, and laughter, and pathos that saints and sinners alike must laugh and cry when they read it.

We clipped such a story yesterday from the inside pages of a paper from one of America's ugly, broad-shoulder industrial cities.

The story tells about the Hal-lowe'en celebration arranged for a group of crippled children and how they worked so hard to be gay. The climax, the part that "got" the radio announcer who came to help them celebrate, was the songs they sang.

There they were, the kids "who didn't get a full hand in destiny's game of cards," heads thrown back, eyes flashing, shouting—

"I'm not the kind to care . . . lucky, lucky me . . . I've got a pocketful of dreams."

Then they demanded "flatfoot Floggie."

How stories do grow! The tip wandered into the office, like many a good tip often does, that a man was painting the steeple of SS Peter and Paul church had fallen thirty feet.

Some said he was badly hurt, others that he had miraculously escaped serious injury.

The cub reporter went to work, and pretty soon he and Father Boniface were both chuckling into their telephones.

What really happened, it seems, is that a itinerant workman came along and asked for something to do. He was set to the task of painting the window frames under the steeple. While he was putting up his rigging, he let a rope fall to the ground. And that, laughed Father Boniface, is all that happened.

And the moral of this story—ah, you guessed it—is be careful of the gossip you start. If a story about a rope and a steeple grows that fast, then think of what awful things you must be starting about the folks next door.

(And it's about time a newspaper writer stopped preaching about the fine art of gossiping, or the finer art of keeping up a conversation without gossiping.)

Somewhat in the same class as the hunters who shoot half tame turkeys on the roost the first day of hunting season, are the truck drivers who knock off the streetlights along Baltimore street. Only the truck drivers don't mean to do it.

A mail truck coming from the Western Maryland freight office got on yesterday, and carried it along on top the truck until it turned into Mechanic street.

And when it comes to service with a smile, Officer Jimmy Condon was right on the job. He whisked into the corner drug borrowed a broom, and swept up the glass before the street cleaning department could have said Jack Robinson.

Almost all the men who eat down-town on occasion know "Mike" Hogan, christened Michael A. "Mike" celebrated in a quiet way Wednesday, not the election, but his sixty-sixth birthday. To those who know Mike, his appearance and spry spirit belie his years. He was no more congenial than usual Wednesday just his congenial self, but his many friends made an event of the occasion, and the restaurant where Hogan holds forth was the scene of an impromptu birthday party after the shades of evening fell.

Will Probated
The estate of Mary A. Hendrickson is divided among her five living children and the children of her deceased daughter, Josephine Mullen, under the terms of her will, admitted to probate in Orphans' court.

Mayor To Ask Legislature For Relief Help

Bond Issue Is Approved By Judge as Only Way Out

Not one word of objection was raised in Circuit Court yesterday as Judge D. Lindley Sloan signed an order allowing the City to advertise and sell $50,000 worth of bonds.

The proceeds will be used to cover a $53,000 deficit in the fund from which the City's share of WPA projects is drawn.

"There is no other way out," Mayor Thomas W. Koon, the sole witness at the public hearing, declared.

"At least 1,300 families are dependent on the city for WPA now. In January we must seek some relief from the General Assembly."

Judge Sloan commented briefly that the situation was unfortunate, but that there appeared nothing else to do.

Rodman Elected Kiwanis Head

John F. Rodman heads the slate of new officers elected yesterday by the Cumberland Kiwanis club.

Mr. Rodman was elected president, the Rev. H. Hall Sharp, vice-president, and George L. Buchanan, treasurer, at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the club at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The meeting was also marked by a discussion of the new wage-hour law and a report on the district convention held at Roanoke, Va., last month.

The discussion, the fourth in a series of forums on live public topics, was under the leadership of Finley C. Hendrickson, chairman of the public affairs committee, while the convention report was made by President Herbert Platt.

Harold Gardiner, a member of the Towson Kiwanis club, was a guest at the meeting.

The new officers will assume their duties in January after an installation ceremony in December.

The new board of directors will elect a secretary at its January meeting.

Present officers of the club are: Herbert Platt, president; John F. Rodman, vice-president; Alexander R. Buchanan, treasurer, and R. S. Barnes, secretary.

"Bonded Husband" Has His Bride Indicted

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—A complaint by the "bonded husband" of a Brooklyn wife led to the indictment today of the woman and her mother on charges of grand larceny and conspiracy.

Timid-looking Joseph Newrick, 38, said the pair had fled him out of his $2,500 life savings by forcing him to post the money pledging—

1. He would be a good husband.
2. He would not run off to his native England.

For two weeks after the marriage, he said, he was not permitted to move into his bride's home until he had put up the cash.

Even then, he declared, he had to sleep on a couch in the living room while his bride, Elvira, 35, slept with her mother, Mrs. Katherine Suro, 66.

To cap the climax, he asserted, he later discovered that his wife had made prior arrangements to divorce him after their marriage in September, 1937.

Forty Years Ago

Employees of the United States Express Company, of Cumberland, received something brand new—hand electric lamps. "The lamps are shaped something like a policeman's club and when a bottom is pressed emit a bright light," the people were told. And Cumberland had taken another step on the road of mechanical progress.

The Lodge of Elks, of Cumberland, made preparations to observe Memorial Day, December 4. Judge T. P. Tarvin, of Kentucky, had been secured to make the address. The local lodge, organized in 1891, had a membership of 76 in 1898.

Services in celebration of the 70th anniversary of the Maryland annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church was announced to be held on Sunday, Nov. 13.

An entertainment under the auspices of Rev. W. A. Thomas, editor of the Signal, a weekly newspaper published in Cumberland for colored people, was given at the Academy of Music in honor of the paper's first anniversary. The program included instrumental solos, vocal solos, orations and a spelling contest for which a $2 prize was given.

Educational Program And Tea at LaVale

An educational program was held at LaVale school yesterday with parents visiting various class rooms from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. Pupils from each grade then took part in an entertainment.

Following the program a committee of Home Room mothers served tea and cookies from 3:30 to 4 o'clock. The serving committee was comprised of Mrs. Harold Ashworth, president, of Home Room Mothers; Mrs. Dudley M. Brown, Mrs. W. Davis, Mrs. D. Long, Mrs. C. Lucas, Mrs. J. M. Barnard, Mrs. A. B. Storey, Mrs. A. Billings, Mrs. G. Brown and Mrs. W. Beale.

Thirty-five mothers were present.

Fort Hill Alumni Plans Grid 'Thuse' and Dance

Plans have been made for its annual Thanksgiving Eve football "thuse" and winter dance by the Penn Avenue-Fort Hill Alumni association. They were perfected at a meeting Monday at Fort Hill high school, at which many ideas were advanced for the improvement of the two projects.

High lighting the pre-game celebration will be a parade through the South End, if present plans materialize. A meeting will be held at the school with songs, cheers and a short speaking program previous to the parade. Enthusiasm within the association has reached heights and several organizations within the school are cooperating to make the event even more successful than last year's.

Within the last twelve months the association has held two dances which were successful and it is anxious to add another to the series before 1938 becomes history. There are several dates available, one of which will be selected Monday night, November 14. Several other projects were presented for action, which will be discussed after definite plans for the "thuse" and dance are completed.
